Arbitration Board and Elevated Officials Appearing at Strike Investigation

BIG EAST BOSTON FIRE; LOSS $150,000

One man was seriously burned, $150,000 damage was caused and three alarms were rung in Boston and one in Chelsea for a fire early today in the mill of the George McQuesten Lumber Company, at No. 170 Border street, East Boston.

pocket of the Suffolk Coal Company at No. 178 Border street. Three fire-boats and half the city's apparatus responded, the latter coming across on the ferry. A thick black smoke went up, visible for miles down the harbor.

Eighteen horses were rescued from the coal company's stable, and forty from the stables of the lumber company. Richard Fossett, a lumber employe, led in getting out the horses.

$10,000 Roxbury Fire.

Fire early today caused $10,000 damage to a three-story wooden building at No. 35 Southampton street, Roxbury, occupied by Green Brothers & Company, wagon makers. Three alarms were sent in.

Twenty-five horses were taken from the building occupied by C. B. Smith and Brother at No. 42 Reading street, adjoining, used as a stable, by Patrolman Foster of Division 9, George Barker, Ned Twenty-one horses were taken out of the stable of Curtis & Pope at No. 44 Reading street.

Fire, early today, destroyed a stable, cottage, storehouse and damaged the Pandora Hotel on Pensmore street, Hough's Neck, Quincy, causing more than 150 persons to make a hurried exit to the street in scant attire. No one was injured. The damage is estimated at $7,000.

Mother Saves Baby.

Mrs. M. Dyer snatched her two-months old baby, George, from a blazing crib today at her home, No. 142 Tyler street, South end. The baby's clothing had ignited. The mother beat the flames out, but the little one's hands, legs and face were burned. Physicians at Grace hospital, where the child was taken, said its burns were serious.

Two horses were burned to death and a loss of $10,000 was caused by a fire early today that destroyed the barn on the estate at Prides Crossing owned by C. K. Cummings of Boston and leased by Henry Stevens of Chicago. Three men employed on the estate were sleeping in the barn but were awakened and escaped.

CAPT. JOHNSON OF THE RAT SQUAD BEGINS CRUSADE

The extermination is to prevent the introduction of the bubonic plague. Johnson will go through the entire water front, using traps and leeches, and sending every catch to the laboratory of the Health Board for examination.

YANKEES LOSE TWO BIG RACES

STOCKHOLM, July 10.—America today lost two of the most important running races of the International Olympic games—the finals in the 1,500-metre race and in the 5,000-metre run. However, defeat was tempered by victory in the 16-pound shot put when P. J. McDonald, a New York policeman, broke the Olympic record by hurling the iron ball more than 50 feet.

All the Yankee athletes taking part in the 200-metre race qualified for the semi-finals.

A. N. S. Jackson of England won the final in the 1,500-metre event. His time was 3 minutes 56 4-5 seconds, leading the Olympic record by 3 2-5 seconds.

Norman S. Taber of Brown University, who ran third in the 1,500-metre final, ran a good race, but he could not overtake the speedy Jackson. Abel Kivlat of the I. A. A. C. was second. The showing of John Paul Jones of Cornell University was a distinct

Fans in Supreme Court by Order of Justice Braley

For the first time in the history of the Supreme Court, palm leaf fans were passed out today by the orders of Judge Braley to witnesses, lawyers and everybody present. The heat was excessive and Judge Braley ordered the court officers to make everybody comfortable.

JUDGE DODGE FOR SCHOFIELD'S PLACE

Judge Frederick Dodge, now of the United States District Court, will be federal judge of the First Circuit, which includes all the New England States. He will succeed the late Judge Schofield. The announcement of the forthcoming nomination was made in Washington today by Representative Gardner of Massachusetts after a conference with the President. Judge Dodge was recommended by Senators Crane and Lodge, and great political influence was brought to bear through them to obtain his appointment.

Essex Prosecutor of Ettor Threatened by 'Black Hand' Letters

Henry C. Attwill, District Attorney of Essex County, who lives at No. 50 Ocean avenue, Lynn, it became known today, has received a number of Black Hand letters in which he has been threatened with death unless he lets up in the prosecution of Joseph Ettor and Arthur Giovannitti, the two I. W. W. leaders arrested as accessories to the murder of a woman in the Lawrence strike.

One of the letters follows:

District Attorney Attwill:

If you do not absolutely and unconditionally release Joseph Ettor and Arthur Giovannitti you will be wiped off the face of the earth. We have stood this legal nonsense long enough.

Our leaders are innocent. Act immediately or your blood will be on our hands.

"I have no fear of any man," said Attwill. "I have not asked for any police protection and do not want any."

A hearing was to have been started yesterday before Referee Gilbert A. A. Pevey in the East Cambridge court, "Dakota Dan" Russell feeling for a delay on the ground that his senior counsel, Senator Leslie A. Simpson of Dickinson, N. D., was unable to be present. Judge Braley ruled today that he must be prepared to go on with his case Monday, at 10 a. m.

MRS. SNEY IS DEAD AT THE AGE OF 106

WORCESTER, July 10.—Mrs. Catherine Sney of North Oxford died today. She was 106 years old November 26. Mrs. Sney was bedridden for the last five years, but could see and hear remarkably well. She smoked a pipe up to the last day of her life. She was born at St. Marie, Canada, and came to Webster eighty-one years ago. Later she moved to Oxford. She leaves two sons and two daughters.

One death and several prostrations came as the heat wave rolled along its deadly way today.

The death was that of George Young, fifty years old, who was overcome Sunday at his home, No. 291 Windsor street, Cambridgeport.

The temperature rose steadily. The official reading of the United States Weather Bureau's local service was ninety-six degrees at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. This was two degrees lower than the temperature at the same hour yesterday, but nobody was enthusiastic about the reduction.

Some relief came this afternoon when the mercury dropped nine degrees as a result of a storm which swept a portion of the Cape district. Boston got only the tailend, with a little rainfall at 2 o'clock.

Thousands welcomed the drops that pitapated for a brief moment. At 2:04 the rain had quit, and a few minutes later the weather man, in response to inquisitive queries over the 'phone, announced that it "was just a mere sprinkle; that's all."

'LOYAL' CONDUCTOR'S CASE IS CONTINUED

The case of Thomas Slamin, one of the Elevated's "loyal" conductors, charged with assault and battery on Eugene Buckley, a Cambridge blacksmith, on June 29, was called before Judge Almy in Cambridge District Court today, but was continued to July 17, owing to Buckley's condition. Buckley is at his home, No. 15 DeWolfe street, with a fractured skull. Slamin's bail was renewed in $2,500.

ARBITRATION BOARD MEMBER ACCUSES L MAN OF FALSEHOOD

Q.—Will you give me some reason why those old and faithful employes were discharged? A.—They were discharged to maintain discipline.

Q.—What do you mean? A.—To maintain discipline.

Q.—Wasn't it because they joined the union? A.—I'm not prepared—er—er—to go further.

Exasperated at the replies of Joseph L. Webber, a division superintendent of the Boston Elevated Railway, Richard P. Barry, a member of the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, which is investigating the strike, turned on the railroad man at today's hearing at the State House, and in the course of severe criticism, declared he he did not believe "one-half that man says."

The board had asked General Bancroft to send the men before it so they might be questioned as to what brought on the strike. Six division superintendents and an inspector appeared today. Webber was the first witness. He had testified that the reason the men were discharged, before the strike, was that they were inefficient.

BARRY ATTACKS L OFFICIAL.

This reply aroused Barry, who has been a member of the board for twenty-six years. He said:

I'm getting sick of this so-called inquiry. I don't believe one-half that man says. His statements are so twisted that at best they are but half truths.

If this board is going to continue to be handicapped by technical objections on the part of any attorneys the hearing will be nothing but a farce. I have been on this board twenty-six years and never before were we handicapped by court procedure rules.

If we are going to arrive at the truth we must have a free and open hearing. The union men who were here answered questions freely and submitted to cross-examination.

This witness knows perfectly well that so many men were not discharged without cause. He is fighting shy of the real question—the thing we want to know.

Why men who were discharged have been before us who had six and seven stripes on their sleeves and had gained the gold reward for faithfulness, and this witness attempts to have us believe that they owned their discharge to inefficiency and that their membership in the union had nothing to do with it.

The whole thing is degenerating into a joke. We want the truth.

"To Maintain Discipline."

Then Barry, turning to the witness, asked sharply:

Q.—Will you give me some reason why those old and faithful employes were discharged? A.—They were discharged to maintain discipline.

Q.—What do you mean? A.—To maintain discipline.

Q.—Wasn't it because they joined the union? A.—I'm not prepared—er—to go further.

Q.—Well, give me something specific—why were those men discharged? A.—They criticised the officials of the company.

Q.—Do you consider the officials of the company above criticism? A.—I don't know.

James H. Vahey, who appeared as counsel for the union men who testified first before the board, asked the right to cross-examine the railroad men. This brought a vigorous protest from Lawyer Henry H. Hurlburt, who represented the railroad.

"If Mr. Vahey is allowed to cross examine the witness," said Mr. Hurlburt, "I shall instruct the witness not to answer."

It was at this juncture that Mr. Barry manifested his impatience with the way things were going.

Hurlburt Raps Barry.

Lawyer Hurlburt, replying to Mr. Barry, said that the Elevated Railway would withdraw unless its witnesses were protected from insult.

"This board at least is supposed to be impartial," said Mr. Hurlburt, "and if any member has already made up his mind on the matter he should at least keep it to himself until all the testimony is presented."

"I still think the man is lying," persisted Barry.

Carl S. Barnes, another inspector, was called to the witness stand. He said that seventeen men had been discharged in his division—Division 2. Chairman Howland asked:

Q.—What reason did you give the men for their discharge. A.—Unsatisfactory service.

Q.—Did you specify any particular thing. A.—No.

Q. (By Mr. Wood of the boards)—Why? A.—I did not consider it necessary.

By Chairman Howland. Q.—Did unsatisfactory service mean that complaints were made? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then the men have been discharged with no chance to learn what they were accused of? Do you want this board to understand that the Elevated sanctioned the discharge of these men for alleged misconduct without giving them an opportunity to defend themselves?

Barnes did not reply.

"Is that what you wish us to understand?" repeated Chairman Howland.

"I don't give any reason," answered Barnes.

Specific Cases.

Barnes was asked about the discharge of a man named Nesdale. He replied that Nesdale agreed to work six days in seven, and was told he would be given any day off that best suited the company. Later he asserted he was going to have Sunday off each week, and when the schedule was arranged for him to have another day off, he attempted to take his car away from the man who was put on to run it.

"That's a lie," shouted Nesdale from the rear of the room, whereupon the chairman stated that such a remark should result in the withdrawal of the offender from the room. Mr. Vahey cautioned his men to avoid all such remarks.

Taking up the cases of other discharged men, Barnes said:

"Tracey was allowed to go because he was indifferent, and when he was set back took so much time in changing cars that he delayed traffic. Van Warr was complained of as being boisterous on his night car. Karus was reported a year ago as under the influence of liquor while on duty and a recommendation for his discharge at that time was died. Recently, when I found he was drinking while off duty, the old recommendation was approved.

"Logan was discharged because he knocked a loose down and denied all knowledge of the accident. Glynn was repeatedly short in his accounts, and Master Mechanic Saunders to a woman, after having trouble with her about change, this being his second offence.

The witness said the number of men discharged between May 1 and June 7 was only the average for that length of time, and he thought fore were discharges in the same period three years ago. He was certain that there was no agreement among the superintendents as to the course to be followed in the event of a strike.

The other railroad men called before the board today were Herbert A. Page, J. L. Smith, Thomas Williams and Carl S. Barnes, division superintendents, and D. F. Bowen, inspector.

Brown Will Contest Opens

"Harold is a very wealthy man in his own right. He was left a large fortune by his mother. And his father, shortly before his marriage to me, gave him another fortune, that ran well into six figures."—Mrs. Brown's comment on stepson.

Son, 'Cut Off,' Files Petition

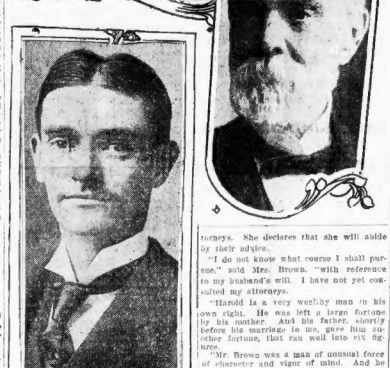
MRS. BROWN, LATE HUSBAND AND STEPSON HAROLD



Lawyer Whipple Asks for Appointment of Special Administrator.

Harold H. Brown will contest the will of his father, the late Samuel N. Brown, who left millions to his second wife and cut off the son with $1,000. Sherman L. Whipple, the Boston attorney, admitted this afternoon that he had been retained by the son to contest the will.

The first step in the efforts to break the will came this afternoon, when Mr. Whipple, on behalf of the son, filed a petition in the Suffolk Probate Court for a special administrator to be appointed, to take possession of the Brown estate, pending expected litigation.

Under the terms of the will Mrs. Brown, who is only forty-five years old, is named as sole executrix.

The preparations for a contest show that the widow will have to defend the millions left by her aged husband. Mr. Brown was eighty-five years old when he died.

Charges Undue Influence.

One paragraph of the will authorizes the executrix to compromise any claims against the estate if she sees fit.

This is regarded by some as a hint that the aged testator feared lest his son would attempt to recover his inheritance in the courts.

The son will contest the will on the ground of undue influence. The widow, who is represented by Dickinson & Dickinson, State street attorneys, will defend the will.

Young Brown has made no secret of his dislike for his step-mother. He strongly opposed his father's second marriage. And the fact that his step-mother is to inherit a fortune which would have reverted to him has fanned his dislike.

Because of these facts, friends of Brown say he will fight the will to the last ditch. And, as he is very wealthy in his own right, having inherited a large fortune from his mother—the first wife of the deceased millionaire—it will be a will fight with millions to push the fight on both sides, and millions at stake.

Harold Brown is about forty years old. He lives at Brandon Hall, Brookline. He is a Spanish War veteran, a yachtsman and an aviator.

Widow's Course Undecided.

What action Mrs. Brown will take—whether she will attempt to avert the impending will fight by dividing the estate with her stepson—will depend on her attorneys. She declares that she will abide by their advice.

"I do not know what course I shall pursue," said Mrs. Brown, "with reference to my husband's will. I have not yet consulted my attorneys.

"Harold is a very wealthy man in his own right. He was left a large fortune by his mother. And his father, shortly before his marriage to me, gave him another fortune, that ran well into six figures.

"Mr. Brown was a man of unusual force of character and vigor of mind. And he was a man of strong convictions. And any action he took was always the result of mature deliberation.

"I have the kindest regard for Harold. If Mr. Brown had left him his entire fortune I should have been content. My only purpose would have been to carry out his last wishes.

"Up to the time of my husband's death I have never discussed business matters with him. I knew, of course, that he had made a will, but as to the contents I never knew and Mr. Brown never informed me. Furthermore, I was not interested."

The widow of the millionaire is a woman of charming personality. She still retains the bloom of youth. Her carriage is equally youthful. She speaks in low, well-modulated tones and is a charming conversationalist.

Mrs. Brown was the daughter of Franklin Ames, a member of one branch of the famous Ames family of North Easton. Her first husband was Joel Bradford, a Brockton business man.

Romance of Swampscott.

The marriage of Samuel Newman Brown to Mrs. Charlotte Thompson Bradford came as a great surprise to the hosts of friends of both the Browns and Mrs. Bradford and to the general public.

Behind the marriage was a romance which involved the love of a man far beyond the allotted span of life, and a pretty widow of half his age. Their engagement was announced on August 28, 1910. Their wedding, on October 12, was in the face of the most bitter opposition of Brown's son, Harold.

It was early in July, 1910, that the aged man met the charming widow. She was a guest at the New Ocean House at Swampscott, of which Brown was proprietor. The then Mrs. Bradford was a guest only a few days when Brown became interested in her. He sought an introduction, immediately he became very attentive to her.

With all the ardor of youth Mr. Brown wooed the fair widow. They were constantly together—driving and automobiling. After a courtship of less than two months their engagement was announced.

To the son, the engagement of his father was equally a surprise. He opposed the match strenuously, but all to no avail. Before the marriage, by a prenuptial agreement, the home of Mr. Brown on Commonwealth avenue, assessed at $85,000, was deeded to Mrs. Brown. At the same time a fortune, estimated at several hundred thousands of dollars, was presented to Harold by his father.

Mr. Brown's first marriage was in Marblehead in 1858. His bride was Miss Ruth Haskell. She died several years ago. Mr. Brown built the Ocean House a generation ago, and made it a paying hobby. He was prominent in developing the real estate of Swampscott.

Marsh Company and of William A. Filene Sons Company closed at noon to allow their employes to go relief.

"About the only condition I have for Boston today," said the Weather Man on the top of the Postoffice building, "is that it is not as hot here as it is in Phoenix, Ariz., where it is 106."

Fair and warm is the prediction for tonight and tomorrow.

It was thought early today that it would be somewhat cooler today than yesterday, and the mercury was generally a couple of degrees lower, but the suffering was just as great, if not greater, because of the exhausted condition of the people.

"There ought to be a local thunder shower," continued the Weather Man, who was all heated up himself, "but I would not insure it. I don't dare prophesy anything in the way of a letup of the present torrid wave."

Men in the street today generally were coatless, and many of them collarless. Fascinated by the high temperatures, they gathered about thermometers, ascertained the figures and then exclaimed:

"Phew! This is some hot! It feels hotter than yesterday."

Ambulance on the Go.

The watering troughs for horses were crowded. Drivers were careful to go slowly and take advantage of every opportunity to give their horses a drink.

The clang of the ambulance resounded frequently through the streets as some person, overcome, was being hurried to a hospital. Soda fountains and other places of refreshment were busy.

Here is the long stretch of high temperatures at noon since the hot wave struck Boston:

July 2, 83; 3, 90; 4, 90; 5, 90; 6, 88; 7, 89; 8, 90.4; 9, 96.

The mercury soared to 99 yesterday, officially. It showed hotter than that in the streets. At 8 o'clock today it was 82 white at the same hour yesterday it was 84.

Any Relief Welcome.

In this city and suburbs few people could sleep last night. The east breeze that had made the nights cool during the first of the hot spell got shunted off somehow. Many people bied to the parks or tried tents. In suburban sections the mosquitoes were annoying to the out-of-doors sleepers.

Because of the exhaustion of the people in fighting the heat the slight respite today was most welcome. Rain is wanted badly all over New England. There has been no rain for fourteen days, except a few drops on Monday. There has been only 4-10 of an inch of rain in thirty-eight days.

Business in Greater Boston has suffered severely from the blistering heat. In some cases where electric fans were not in use stores were closed.

When the seven hundred or more operatives in the chocolate mills of Walter Baker & Co. at Dorchester Lower Mills reported today for work, they were told that they could go home, as the mills would not be operated on account of the heat.

EX-SENATOR EXPIRES.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Former State Senator William F. Mackey of Lancaster, N. Y., grand master of the United Hotel Bristol today. He was fifty-three years old.

DEATHS

JAMES W. GREGG of Everett, sixty-one, former grand master of the United States Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F. M. U., is dead of heart disease at his home in that city. He attended a grand lodge meeting of the order in Quincy Monday.

OLIVER E. O. EMERSON, seventy-eight, banker and ex-Mayor of Titusville, Pa., is dead at the Emerson homestead in York, Me. He was an associate of John D. Rockefeller in the Standard Oil company.

DR. THOMAS H. BACHE of Philadelphia, eighty-six, a great-great-grandson of Benjamin Franklin, is dead at his home in that city.

The REV. FR. FRANCIS W. GUNN, sixty-eight, professor of mathematics at Holy Cross College, is dead. He formerly was a teacher at Philadelphia, New York and Baltimore.

BEWARE OF FIRE; HEED THESE HINTS BY COMMISSIONER

Fire Commissioner Charles H. Cole today gave the following suggestions as to how to prevent fire in hot weather:

Be careful in the use of matches. Use safety matches. Don't drop a lighted match. Put the flame out.

Clean up all heaps of refuse that might catch fire. If there are any dangerous heaps in the neighborhood tell a policeman or fireman.

Don't clean clothing with benzine or naphtha in a room. Do it out in the open.

Don't allow the blinds to remain up so that the sun can shine through the glass. It might ignite some flimsy material in the room. Pull down the blinds.

Look out for the gas jets when the windows are up. A puff of wind may blow a curtain into them.

H. J. CUNNINGHAM GETS NEW BERTH

Mayor J. Edward Barry of Cambridge today appointed Henry J. Cunningham as the first man to fill the new office of Commissioner of Public Safety, to have charge of the fire and police departments, at a salary of $5,000. The appointment was not unexpected, as Mr. Cunningham has been prominently mentioned for the place.

Interested comment was made by citizens that two other candidates for the Mayor's approval were his official clerk, Edward A. Counihan, Esq., and his last campaign manager, James T. Whalen.

Henry J. Cunningham is a real estate dealer who is active in Cambridge politics and affairs. He was chief of police in 1903, displacing Police Chief Pullen. The next year Pullen was reinstated and has held the office since. The new commissioner will now be a superior officer to the police chief and also to Fire Chief Nat W. Bunker.

Our Summer Friend, Sea Serpent, Back; 150 Feet Long Now

Our old friend the sea serpent that for the last ten years has been the source of delight to New England Summer visitors and newspapermen is with us again. He has grown good-looking and is just a little larger than in years past.

On July 5 the monster of the seas was seen off Georges Bank, seventy-five miles southeast of Highland Light, headed for our shores. Captain Frank Nolan of the fishing schooner Massasoit, just in at T Wharf from a swordfishing trip, told this story to Secretary Dimock of the Boston fish bureau:

"We saw the head of this monster, the like of which I never saw before while on the banks. We clapped on all sail to get up with this fellow to see just what it looked like, but when within an eighth of a mile of him, he disappeared.

"The head was big with large fins, and 150 feet back of the head his tail was lashing the sea in a fury. In the sunlight the serpent gleamed and glistened a bluish green tint, and with the head reared out of the water it looked like a slipper ship."

BROOKLINE'S TAX RATE WILL JUMP

Brookline is to have an increase in the tax rate. It was $12.20 a thousand last year. It will probably reach $13 a thousand this year. The town can stand it, for it is the richest town in the world. The total valuation of the town is about $112,000,000, and the taxes to be collected as a result of this year's levy will approximate $1,500,000. The biggest taxpayer is Quincy A. Shaw, for the Shaw estate, the valuation being $2,220,300.

"JOIN THE UNION," MEN SAY, THEN BEAT CONDUCTOR

Irving Taylor of No. 15 Howe street, Somerville, an electric car conductor, was beaten by a band of men at Marshall street and Oakland avenue, Somerville, early today, he told the police. Taylor was going home. One of the men asked him for a match. "You want to be a good sport like us and join the union," Taylor says he was told. Then he was struck a blow on the jaw which knocked him down, when he was kicked in the ribs. A policeman found him and helped him home.

HELEN KELLER IN THAW HOME

CRESSON, Pa., July 10.—Miss Helen Keller, who, after being deaf, dumb and blind since her birth, two weeks ago made a speech at Providence, R. I., has arrived here and will pass the Summer with her teachers on the estate of Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, mother of Harry K. Thaw. Miss Keller will complete her study of articulation and by Fall is expected to be able to talk as clearly as any one. Miss Keller's teachers are Mrs. John Macer, her lifelong companion, and Professor and Mrs. John W. White of the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston.

Professor White has spent months teaching the girl to talk. Miss Keller's vocal organs are perfectly normal, but she never has been able to hear a word nor see. It is difficult for her even to learn the proper lip movements. By slow degrees she got control of the sounds she always has been able to make. At first only Mrs. Macer was able to understand her, but when Miss Keller spoke in Providence most of the audience, members of the American Association to Promote the Teaching of Speech to the Deaf, understood her words.

How would you go about it to describe a sound, to a person who never had heard one? How would you tell a person to make the sound of the letter A, for instance, when that person had never heard a sound, and had nothing with which to make a comparison? Answer that question, and the difficulties under which Miss Keller's teachers have worked, may be understood.

Miss Keller and her teachers this Summer will occupy a fine old house which formerly was a rectory on the Thaw estate near Cresson.

ELLEN GARDNER LORING, BRIDE OF SAMUEL VAUGHAN

MISS LORING BRIDE TODAY

The wedding of Miss Ellen Gardner Loring, only daughter of Augustus Peabody Loring of Marlboro street to Samuel Vaughan, son of William Warren Vaughan of Beacon street, which took place this afternoon at the country seat of Miss Loring's parents at Pride's Crossing, was marked by its simplicity, although one of the most important social events of the season.

The ceremony was witnessed by members of the two families and a few friends. Miss Loring was not attended. Her father gave her in marriage. A. P. Loring, Jr., who married Miss Rosamond Bowditch, and Caleb Loring were the ushers.

There was a reception and scores of invitations were issued. Most of the people of prominence along the North Shore attended.

Miss Loring's engagement to Mr. Vaughan was announced last November. She is best known to her friends as "Miss." She is gifted as a singer and has studied considerably abroad. Mr. Vaughan, who is a graduate of Harvard '09, is a member of the Tennis and Racquet Club.

READING MAN IS KILLED BY ELECTRICS

John McDonald, seventy, of Reading square, Reading, was killed today by an electric car inbound from Lawrence. The accident happened in North Main street, nearly opposite Laurel Hill Cemetery. McDonald died in the office of Dr. E. D. Richmond.

MISS BAYNE HAD $2,446 WEDDING

NEW YORK, July 10.—The cost of financing a society girl's wedding is revealed in papers filed by Robert, B. Roosevelt, Jr., father of Mrs. Olga Roosevelt Bayne of Washington, who was married November 15, last. Among the items are:

Wedding supper—$564.
Trousseau—$1,200.
Dinner dance at Chevy Chase Club—$87.
Music—$105.
Tips given by bride—$15.
Bride's gift to clergyman—$100.
Bridesmaids' lockets (five)—$375.

This makes a total of $2,446. In addition, the living expenses of the bride for the month of the marriage were $365 and her father paid $300 for Fidelity, her horse. Mrs. Bayne reached the age of twenty-one April 5 last. Because she is no longer an infant in the eyes of the law her father wishes to turn over to her management the estate she inherited from her mother, Grace Roosevelt. Mrs. Roosevelt died in 1894, leaving most of her estate to her daughter. She was a cousin of ex-President Theodore Roosevelt.

Mrs. Olga Roosevelt Bayne is the wife of Dr. Joseph Breckenridge Bayne. Her mother died in 1894, when Mrs. Bayne was three years old, leaving $70,000 in trust for the little girl. This is the third legacy Mrs. Bayne has received in three years.

Three weeks ago she got $300,000 from the estate of her grandfather, Lorenzo G. Woodhouse of Burlington, Vt. Three years ago she inherited $200,000 from the estate of Mrs. Stephen S. Cummins. This totals $815,000. The interest accumulated during her minority will bring the whole over the million dollar mark.

I've Got to Have Money at Once and Shall Sacrifice a $70,000.00 Stock to Get It!

The public may well believe the frantic appeals of the merchants of this city who are endeavoring to raise money by selling their merchandise at terribly reduced prices. I for one am not afraid to confess that never before in my business life have I found it necessary to sell my stock at such ruinously low prices to raise enough cash to meet my obligations. I am in the same boat with the other merchants who suffered terribly through the horrible Spring and early Summer weather. Stock that usually sold quickly in the season simply piled up on my shelves until now I have to sell it at a loss that wipes out my usual year's profit. The blockading of my side of Summer Street by the building of the new Filene store was an additional handicap that I, together with a few other merchants on this street, was obliged to suffer. Sidewalk obstructions of the new building no longer exist; the streets are now clear to attend my big Sale. I am expecting the greatest shoe sale Boston ever saw. The finest models of the year for men, women and children have been CUT TO FACTORY COST AND LESS. I MUST HAVE $30,000 CASH FROM THE PUBLIC IMMEDIATELY OR FACE RUIN! Cash is all that will save me, and I am making the supreme effort of my life TO MAKE YOU COME AND BUY. WM. SHEINWALD, 40 Summer Street.

Mrs. Leeds Takes Father to Newport In Health Quest

NEW YORK, July 10.—Mrs. William B. Leeds who was Nannie Stewart, to whom her husband, the "tin-plate king," left the income of $50,000,000, has taken her father, William C. Stewart, from his beautiful home at Montclair, N. J., to the residence of J. Townsend Burden at Newport, where she is living pending the completion of improvements to her own villa, "Rough Point." It is her father's critical condition that caused her recent return from Europe.

Mr. Stewart is seriously ill of heart disease, and it now seems improbable that his wife, the stepmother of Mrs. Leeds, will ever see him again. Mrs. Stewart left the Leeds residence on South Mountain avenue, Montclair, in August, 1910, and with her daughter, Miss Fern Parkhurst, is passing the summer in a little town in New York. At Montclair it was said that Mrs. Stewart, learning indirectly that her husband is dangerously ill, offered to go there to see him, but her proposition was repulsed.

Mrs. Leeds made and personally carried out the elaborate arrangements to take her father to Newport. A private car, Independence, arrived at Montclair at 8:40 a. m. yesterday. An ambulance from New York carried Mr. Stewart to the Independence at the Lackawanna railroad station.

ROBERT TAFT SURE FATHER WILL WIN

CHICAGO, July 10.—Robert Taft, the athletic, sun-tanned son of President Taft, spent several hours in Chicago.

"Is your father going to be re-elected?" queried an interpreter.

"Certainly," said Robert Taft.

"No doubt about it?" further questioned the interviewer.

"None in the world," answered Robert Taft. "I have been out West for several months, and everything out there is favorable for his election. I can see nothing but victory for him. I am now on my way back to Washington."

GOVERNMENT MAY BUY JEFFERSON HOME

FENWAY SCHOOL COURT BATTLE ON TOMORROW

The fight to prevent the erection of the new High School of Commerce in the Fenway, waged by Alice B. Thayer, Mrs. John L. Gardner, Sylvester Baxter, Moorfield Storey, former Mayor Nathan Matthews and others, is nearing a climax after having dragged along many months.

The suit brought by Mrs. Thayer, who lives at No. 30 Fenway road, is scheduled to come up for a hearing tomorrow in the United States District Court. This fact has quickened interest in the controversy which concerns many wealthy persons with homes or property bordering on the Fenway.

Mrs. Thayer resorted to the Federal Court on a constitutional question. She seeks an injunction to restrain the city from building the schoolhouse in the Fens on the ground that it diverts the site and purposes of a public park and violates the State and Federal constitutions.

To give weight to her action, Sylvester Baxter, as secretary of the Metropolitan Improvement League, filed an affidavit of protest, claiming that use of a slice of the Fenway for school purposes would act as a dangerous precedent.

City Eager to Proceed.

The legal department of the city expects to be able to overcome any opposition in the courts. There is a feeling among city officials, from the Mayor down, that the court proceedings instituted by opponents will fail and that nothing can stop the building of the school on the site selected opposite Peterborough street.

The confidence the city authorities have in the success of the plan was indicated when bids were opened. The contractors submitting the lowest bid were Whitten & Haynes Company, $480,000, and the highest estimate was $562,783, submitted by C. M. Leach.

If the courts refuse the injunction, as the city legal department expects, operations will be started without delay. On the other hand the remonstrants threaten to carry their case to the United States Supreme Court if necessary. This might delay the undertaking four or five years, unless a different site should be settled upon, and it isn't likely to be, judging from what Mayor Fitzgerald said today.

Mayor Fitzgerald said:

The High School of Commerce has been kicked from pillar to post, so far as location is concerned. The business men didn't want it in Fort Hill square, claiming that it would shut out their light and air. Then Park square was suggested and fussed about, and now the Fenway opposition to the Fenway site.

But let me say that there isn't a logical objection to erecting the school structure in the Fens. It would be an ideal location, and with the fine building planned would greatly enhance the beauty of an already beautiful spot. There isn't a more suitable site in all Boston. Besides the pupils would have plenty of open space for sport and recreation.

Mayor Discusses Case.

No, I don't think Mrs. Thayer and the other abutters object to the children using the Fens. They are simply standing upon what they consider their rights, but they are viewing it from the wrong perspective, as time will convince them.

Their opposition is based entirely upon sentiment. Sylvester Baxter, who as secretary of the Metropolitan Improvement League, pretends to be seeking for the beautiful, and opposes the erection of a splendid school structure, but he and his colleagues have not raised a single word of protest about the various other public buildings and enterprises in the vicinity.

If riding-schools, and warehouses and museums and even a baseball park can spring up on the border of the Fens without complaint, I don't see why a modern public school building should be objected to.

The new baseball park is within 200 yards of the Fenway and other public buildings stand on its very edge. What about these?

There are ten or twelve acres in that section of the Fenway which have never been used or developed. It has resembled a dump more than anything else. Few knew that it was part of the park. It has lain neglected thirty-five years. This administration is the first to think of using it. I have often wondered if much of the opposition isn't due to the fact that I fostered the High School of Commerce and that certain interests may not care to have it get too nice a location.

I promised the people of Boston that I would do all in my power to erect this school building, and seven years have elapsed and it isn't built yet.

Baxter Makes Reply.

The boys would have a chance over there to have a proper playground or stadium for schoolboy sports. The Fenway site is the place for the High School of Commerce and the only place. By utilizing this unused and undeveloped corner of the Fens the city will save $200,000 or more, which with the $600,000 appropriated, ought to be enough to cover all expenses. Said Sylvester Baxter, in reply to the Mayor:

Abutters are not afraid of the park being overrun by children nor is there any underlying motive to antagonize Mayor Fitzgerald. The Mayor means all right, but he doesn't seem fully to appreciate the urgency and value of holding every foot, yes, every inch of park soil secured for the purpose it was intended, namely a place of recreation, and not a place for the erection of school or other private or public buildings.

If the city wishes to have the Fenway as a setting for the new High School of Commerce, why doesn't it buy a strip of land abutting, as other private interests have done. It has no right to appropriate a slice of the park for such a purpose. It is encroachment pure and simple and contrary to law and regulations.

That is why Mrs. Thayer, our league and the other opponents object to the site. There is no political prejudice or personal feeling in the matter.

We opponents merely realize that to permit such a thing would establish a dangerous precedent. What park would be safe? The first thing you know there would be schools springing up in every park.

The Metropolitan Improvement League feels that the Fenway, like all parks, should be protected from such intrusion. The public parks were not intended for such purposes. Why start such a thing, then? Not long ago the league opposed the straightening of Boylston street, which would have caused the removal of the John Boyle O'Reilly statue. The league was formed for the advancement of public improvements and all things pertaining to the rights of the public in such matters.

"Sacred as Common."

The baseball park and riding schools are not within the park. They may be on the border. The city could build this school on the border but has no right to place it within the park confines. The Fens should be kept as sacred as the Common.

There is another feature to be considered. The abutters, like Mrs. Thayer who has brought this suit, feel that after having been compelled to contribute fully 75 per cent. of the park betterments they should not have their rights and view trespassed upon.

Lotta Crabtree Tells Girls How to Succeed in Life

Gives Up Horseracing for Study of Art in Paris

"Better Be Successful Mother Than Successful Bookkeeper," Advises Famous Actress.

LOTTA CRABTREE SAYS:

A girl, to succeed in the world, must be her own self.

I'm not a suffragist—I'm too busy—but I believe in suffrage.

It's a far greater honor to be a successful mother and wife than a successful stenographer or bookkeeper.

Laughter and fun are important ingredients in life. Joy is a wonder-worker.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Art and not horse-racing is now the grand passion of the world's wealthiest and most charming actress, Lotta Crabtree, and now she has sailed on the Franconia for Europe to devote her Summer to the study of art in Paris.

We were on board the boat when Miss Crabtree and her attorney arrived. "That's Lotta" I was informed, and looked in every direction for a "small, elderly woman," for that was how she had been described to me. So when a youthful-looking woman all in brown came smilingly toward me and said in her hearty, cheery way, "I'll be with you in just a moment dear," I was sure it was some one who had taken me for a relative or friend down to see them off. I could hardly believe my eyes or ears when I was again informed that that was Miss Crabtree.

A small, girlish, well-rounded figure, a piquantly pretty and beautifully expressive face, a rose and cream complexion and brownish gold hair—that's the picture of Lotta as I saw her.

"My secret of success?: My dear, I think the key to all success is naturalness and sincerity," she said. Then she went on:

"If a girl is going to truly succeed in the world she must be her own self, and she must realize that she is a queen in her own right. Her ideal of this queendom must be a high one, and her one aim in life must be to live up to that ideal.

Must Fight for Success.

Naturally, there is no success without concentration and struggle. Everything we get in life we must fight for, and we must realize that anything really worth getting is worth the fight.

"There is something—some intangible something—in each person that contributes to his or her success. We can't just put our finger on that something, but it's there.

"Motherhood and wifehood are as much vocations as any other lines, and require as much study and preparation as do all the other lines of work.

"There are more old maids married than there are single. All girls are not born to be mothers or wives any more than all men are born to be lawyers or ministers. But there is no more ideal calling for a woman than that of wifehood and motherhood.

"A girl, to succeed in that, as in any other line must realize the great possibilities within her—the great good of which she is capable. She must have pride in herself and demand respect from everybody. But she can't expect this respect unless she deserves it, and not only that, but she'll never get it for long unless she deserves it.

"No, I'm not a suffragist, but I do believe in suffrage. I'm far too busy to take any active interest in it.

"Which woman stands the better chance for the real worthwhile success, the married woman or the unmarried woman?" I asked her.

Infatuation and Love.

"That depends entirely upon what you call success," she replied. "To my mind it's a far greater honor for a woman to be a successful mother and wife than a successful stenographer or bookkeeper. But it all depends upon the calling.

"There is many a woman who has won some great success in music, art or financial pursuits who would be an absolute failure as a wife and mother, and vice versa, all of which goes to prove that we must wait for our 'call' and whatever it is, respond joyfully. But a girl should be very careful and be sure that she is not mistaking infatuation for love.

"Yes, I do think love the greatest thing in the world, but it doesn't come to all any more than wealth comes to all.

"'If we'd be loved we must lovable be,' you know."—and again she perked her head in the bird-like pose which comes so natural to her, and queried, 'Don't you agree with me?'

We can make ourselves just about what we wish, and to be lovable is about one of the best things a girl can be.

"There is so much in the world to make us happy that why should we bother about the few things which come occasionally—and only occasionally—just for the sake of contrast, and to make us enjoy our blessings all the more."

"It's a long step from racing horses to art; isn't it?" I inquired as she spoke of her love of art.

"Yes, but always I have loved art for art's sake. My owning of race horses came simply out of my love for horses and not my love of racing. I don't own any horses now, simply because I found it impossible to find people to properly care for them.

"I have never selected the lines along which my success has run. They have simply opened up, and I have been guided into them. A stage career was never my ambition, but when it came to me, or rather the opportunity, I seized it, and tried my best to make the most of it. And so with all the other things.

Ah, but laughter and fun are such important ingredients of life, and as I look back I am glad I was able to bring smiles and laughter into the world, even temporarily, and I think that is what we should all strive to do all through our lives. Joy is the greatest wonderworker of the world.

"Joy in life, joy in doing for others and joy in our every day homely tasks elevates them in dignity of real privileges, and so we should regard them.

"The one big don't for the average girl of today is don't be superficial and the one big 'do' is DO be natural.

"Now do smooth all the wrinkles out of my picture, won't you?" she said as she turned in her butterfly fashion to the photographer.—"Just iron them out and make me look young and beautiful."

"Since you've stopped horse-racing, I think you might take up aeroplaning," was suggested to the wonderful Lotta.

"No, indeed, oh, it is so sad the way they are all killed, but that is just what will keep happening right along.

And after bidding us good-bye she ditted off in her birdlike fashion to her stateroom to see about some detail before the boat set sail.

THAW IS SANE, SAYS DR. WHITE

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., July 10.—Dr. William A. White, an alienist of wide reputation and head of the Federal Insane Asylum at Washington, D. C., today gave it as his opinion that Harry K. Thaw is sane and that there is no deviation from the normal in the slayer of Stanford White. The alienist was the first witness called when the sanity hearing was resumed today before Judge Keogh.

Dr. White has testified briefly before in the present trial, but Clarence J. Shearn, attorney for Thaw, recalled him and took him over the entire case and asked him for specific data gotten from the questioning of the examination of Thaw. Hopes of finishing testimony tuning in the hearing by both sides was dispated today when Mr. Shearn stated that it would be Friday at least before his case was all in.

JOB HARRIMAN TO AGAIN TAKE STAND IN DARROW CASE

LOS ANGELES, July 10.—Job Harriman, the first witness of the Darrow defence, was expected to take the stand for further examination when the trial of the Chicago attorney was resumed today. Harriman has already testified that he had never at any time given Darrow $4,000 in currency as Bert Franklin swore he did. Harriman further stated that there was no safe in Darrow's office or in the adjoining room where Franklin said he went with Darrow to get the money. Harriman said the only safe in the suite was in his office and that the combination was held by himself, his secretary and John R. Harrington.

SURE DESLOVRES WILL BE ACQUITTED

PROVIDENCE, July 10.—Eugene Juliet, attorney for Henri Desloves, charged with the murder of Mrs. Parmenter-Delmarien, believes that he will prove that the headless body that was found in the Blackstone river was not the body of Angele Delmarle. Juliett hinted today that he had evidence which will prove that Angele Delmarle was alive and well at a date after she disappeared from home. The attorney for the defence asserts that the clothing found in the river did not belong to Angele Delmarle.

MRS. GRANT ARRIVES WITH GRANDDAUGHTER

NEW YORK, July 10.—The little Princess Bertha Cantacuzene, granddaughter of the late General Frederick Dent Grant, arrived here today from Europe with her grandmother, Mrs. Frederick D. Grant. Mrs. Grant brought the little princess, who is eleven years old, from St. Petersburg for a couple of months' stay in America. They went to the Manhattan Hotel for a couple of weeks, and then they are going to Newport. The General's widow was in deep mourning.

Sues Mrs. Woodruff for $25,000 Damages

A sensational aftermath of the Woodruff divorce case, tried last May in the Dedham courts, was the suit for $25,000 for alleged defamation of character, filed by Mrs. Frances B. Silvernail of Cambridge, against Mrs. Woodruff.

In the Woodruff case, Mrs. Mildred Hoyt Woodruff secured a divorce. In her libel she named Mrs. Silvernail as corespondent. After hearing some testimony, however, Judge King ordered the Mrs. Silvernail's name stricken out.

Mrs. Silvernail now claims that she was the victim of the malicious intents of Mrs. Woodruff, and that the latter unjustly accused her both in her libel and in the testimony offered at the trial.

Mrs. Silvernail declares that Mrs. Woodruff persisted in her charges until the court interfered and would not allow her (Mrs. Silvernail) to be persecuted further, thus, claims Mrs. Silvernail, proving her innocence.

HONOR HERO AT FUNERAL RITES

The body of John Crow of Somerville, who saved a friend from drowning in the Mystic river Saturday but lost his own life, lies in Woodlawn cemetery. Many relatives and friends attended the funeral from the house of the young man's father at No. 79 Prospect street, Somerville. Many others viewed the body. It was estimated that over one thousand in all paid tribute to Mr. Crow's heroism by attending the service or calling at the house.

The bearers were G. Burns, J. Cunningham, W. Gillogly, Simon Bourdeau, G. H. McDonald and Walter Mitts.

Deep sympathy was expressed for the bride of only seventeen years. Mr. Crow was only twenty years old. He was recently married, had good prospects and was very happy in his home life and associations.

BRANDEIS OUT FOR WILSON

Louis D. Brandeis, the noted lawyer and trust fighter of Boston, in a statement issued today, calls on all Progressives, irrespective of party, to support Woodrow Wilson for President of the United States.

"His nomination," says Mr. Brandeis, who has been a leading Republican Progressive, "ranks among the most encouraging events in American history."

This is Mr. Brandeis' statement:

Mr. Brandeis' Statement.

Progressives—irrespective of party affiliations—should, in my opinion, support Woodrow Wilson for the Presidency, should support him fully, actively and enthusiastically; for he possesses in a high degree the qualities of an effective progressive leader.

Governor Wilson is thoroughly democratic in spirit. He recognizes that all of the people are entitled to equal opportunities and appreciates that the development of all of the people is essential to the attainment of American ideals.

He understands the dangers incident to the control by a few of our industries and finance.

He sees that true Democracy and social justice are unattainable unless this power of the few be curbed, and our Democracy become industrial as well as political.

He can meet the demands properly made upon a present-day executive, to be able to lead in constructive statesmanship as well as to administer efficiently; for Wilson's character, intellectual power and previous training fit him peculiarly to take an important part in progressive legislation. He is courageous and frank; able and firm and always open-minded—qualities indispensable to sage leadership.

Democracy Triumphs.

Progressives should support Wilson, not only in order to secure his election, but in order to enable him after election to carry out those progressive policies which he has so much at heart. His nomination ranks among the most encouraging events in American history. Under the masterful and masterly leadership of Colonel Bryan, the ideals of American Democracy triumphed over the reactionaries and their money bags; the will of the people prevailed over the devices of the machine.

The Baltimore convention was conducted with fairness and seriousness and with a dignity worthy of a great cause and a great people.

The Democratic party has purified itself and has been purged of its corrupt associations so far as it is possible to accomplish this end by the action of a National convention.

But the struggle of privilege for privilege is unending and omnipresent. That struggle is as subtle as it is determined. The struggle will not cease when Wilson is elected. We may be sure that every effort he may make as President to carry out the progressive policies will meet with stubborn resistance from the possessors and apostles of privilege.

Without loyal support from the progressives of the country Wilson's wise union against privilege must be futile. The progressive cause can succeed only if it has loyal support from the progressives. It can only if the progressives fail in their duty of giving to Wilson their full support.

GORE TALKS TO WILSON

This striking photograph shows Thomas P. Gore, the blind Senator from Oklahoma, imparting some startling information to Governor Wilson at Sea Girt. The Senator, who is one of the most interesting figures in public life, was in charge of the Wilson campaign in Oklahoma.

GOMPERS LIKES WILSON PLANKS

TRENTON, N. J., July 10.—Governor Woodrow Wilson, Democratic Presidential nominee, and Samuel Gompers, Frank Morrison, Dennis Hayes and other representatives of the American Federation of Labor, were in conference for an hour at the State House here.

Mr. Gompers declared that he and others will report to the executive board of the Federation, and that then a statement will be made of that body's attitude on the Presidential race. He said:

We discussed with the Governor the platform adopted by the Baltimore convention and expressed ourselves as being in entire approval with the planks which apply to legislation and principles affecting the rights of the working people of the United States.

"I think the platform goes as far as a great political party can declare under the present industrial and political conditions —that it, with any degree of assurance of being enacted into law."

Talked of Labor Plank.

Gompers said no other questions in the platform were discussed, and when asked what particular phases were considered, said:

"We discussed that part of the platform which applies to the issuance of injunctions and contempt proceedings growing out of the abuse of the writ.

"We also discussed the declaration that voluntary associations of workingmen should not properly come under the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law, as being in illegal restraint of trade, but should be treated as associations of men and women dealing in no product, and not organized for profit.

"We also discussed the declaration in regard to the proper manning of vessels and the abolition of involuntary servitude for seamen."

It was Governor Wilson's first journey from his Summer home at Sea Girt since he became candidate. He went by automobile to the State House.

As he reached the office the Governor found all the members of his official family lined up, waiting to greet him. He shook hands with each one.

Miss Ida M. Phillips, the Governor's confidential stenographer, told him she had received from 500 to 1,000 letters a day since he was at the State House.

Wilson joined the heads of his State departments at luncheon in the State House.

Wilson Fights Campaign Plan.

Governor Wilson has taken the bit in his teeth and refused to countenance the plan suggested at the recent conference with Norman E. Mack, which provided for both a chairman of the National committee and a campaign manager.

It is the plan of the Democratic candidate to have a progressive, a man of the type of William F. McCombs, to organize and lead the fight. Every precaution will be taken to prevent the campaign manager from being handicapped by bosses under the control of capital.

Governor Wilson has got the determination had anything to do with the resignation of Thomas J. Taggart of Indiana, as a member of the National committee and as chairman, Governor Wilson said that Mr. Taggart's withdrawal had come out of a clear sky and that it had been a surprise to him.

Governor Wilson's advisers had pointed out that in the Parker campaign there was both a National chairman and a campaign manager. The campaign committee was composed of Thomas F. Ryan, August Belmont, Senator Thomas S. Martin of Virginia and William F. Sheehan. Taggart was the National chairman but Belmont and Ryan held the money bag.

KELLOGG ON FENCE.

CHICAGO, July 10.—Whether he will clamber aboard the third party band wagon or whether he will remain "regular" was information which "Trust Buster" Frank B. Kellogg, of Minnesota, a leader of the Roosevelt fight in the Republican national convention here refused to give today. "I'm not committed to either Taft or Roosevelt," he said.

HILLES OPENS TAFT CAMPAIGN

WASHINGTON, July 10.—A statement issued by Charles D. Hilles, new chairman of the Republican National Committee, marked the opening gun of President Taft's campaign for re-election.

Today James R. Reynolds of Massachusetts, who was named as secretary of the National Committee will secure rooms for the New York headquarters probably in the Metropolitan Building and expects to have them ready for Mr. Hilles next week.

Mr. Hilles declares the confidence of the Republican party in its cause. It follows:

"The Republican party approaches the presidential campaign with confidence in the solemnity of its cause and in the integrity and ability of the candidates who represent that cause. Progress with order is good doctrine for the Republican party today, as it has been since the day of its birth.

"More has been accomplished in the last three years under the administration of President Taft than was ever before accomplished by an American President in the same period of time.

"A distinct line of demarcation between the Republican party and the Democratic party is revealed in the platforms adopted at Chicago and Baltimore. One is an earnest of future progress through a record of achievements; the other is a promise containing a denial of the good that has been done.

"Upon the solid rock of the rights of the individual as granted by the Constitution, the Republican party builds its structure of optimism. The Democratic party, on the other hand, in the opening sentence of its address to the electorate, betrays its recessional quality.

"It declares as false the vital issue of the Constitutional liberties of the individual. Such liberties are now assailed by those who advocate the overthrow of the independence of the judiciary. It would leave the individual defenseless in the protection of those rights declared inalienable under the Constitution."

$300 TO $250 ON TAFT REPORTED AS WALL STREET BET

NEW YORK, July 10.—Wall Street has not been able to get down to hard pan in sizing up the sporting chances in the coming election. Real bets have been few and far between, the the convention closed, and for small amounts.

The Curb heard that there was some offers of even money on Taft, but when they sent emissaries to put up Wilson money, the alleged offers had taken cover. It was reported that $250 of Wilson money had been wagered against $300 put up by a Taft banker, but it was said to be an isolated bet.

FIGHT AGAINST SPLIT IN WEST VIRGINIA

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 10.—A stormy session of the Republican State Committee was begun here today, when an effort was made to prevent a split in the party to save the State ticket. Dr. H. D. Hatfield, nominee for Governor, announced he would resign if the split in the party nationally is allowed to disrupt the State party. If the committee finds the electors favor Roosevelt, as is claimed, plans will be made to nominate electors pledged to Taft.

HOUN' DAWGS HIT BY MARKET SLUMP

WASHINGTON, July 10.—There is a little general store in a rickety old frame building in Pennsylvania avenue, close to Capitol Hill. The widow who runs it bought a supply of miniature "houn' dawgs" about a month ago, when the Champ Clark boom was at its height. She filled the window with them and advertised them at 25 cents. Now she has removed the quarter sign and put a "two for a nickel" placard in its place.

PROHIBITIONISTS MAY BE "PROGRESSIVES"

CONVENTION HALL, Atlantic City, July 10.—Trouble looms for Colonel Roosevelt and his new party in the pre-convention talk of the Prohibitionists gathering here. Many of the delegates feel their platforms of the past entitle them fairly to the use of the term "progressive," and they will make every effort to have the convention adopt that word as the party designation.

SENATOR CRANE AT MANCHESTER VILLA

LENOX, July 10.—Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Murray Crane, Jr., of Dalton, have taken a villa at Manchester for the summer. R. W. Thayer and C. H. Dodge of Boston, and Charles L. Nichols of Brooklyn are at the Red Lion Inn, Stockbridge. At the Curtis Hotel are Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Walker of Brookline.

WHAT A BULL MOOSE MEANS

—By Rev. W. J. Long.

NEW YORK, July 10.—The Rev. William J. Long, first and permanent president of the Oratic Bay Annales Club, who will be remembered as the clergyman who invoked the Presidential anger, and, as a natural consequence, the Theodoric vocabulary, upon his devoted head because he told how a wolf killed a caribou fawn, has a scathing article in this week's Independent anent the bull moose as a beast and a party emblem.

Mr. Long, with the help of numerous extracts from a book entitled "The Wilderness Hunter," written by one T. Roosevelt, years and years ago, has written some things. For instance:

"Lives in Public Domain."

"The bull moose lives on the public domain and is a very wasteful feeder.

"He is of a wandering and flightly disposition. His flesh, moreover, is coarse and stringy; his hide is thick and 'of very poor quality,' as T. Roosevelt says, and he ought to know.

"The bull moose never steals; he simply takes what he wants. He has fed on public property so long that he considers it all rightfully his.

"A curious fact about the bull moose at moments of emotional excitement is that he readily answers a call and comes headlong to meet it. Almost everything will serve for an issue when the bull moose is in a receptive attitude.

"In many other ways the bull moose shows symptoms of emotional fits and of a disordered intellect. As T. Roosevelt says (p. 229): 'He frequently shows a curious slowness of apprehension which amounts to downright stupidity.'

"Inordinate Selfishness."

"Another noticeable characteristic of the bull moose is his inordinate and unchangeable selfishness. Whether roaming the woods in solitude, or tearing up the earth, or coming headlong to the call, he is thinking, first, last and all the time, of the safety of his own skin and the fulness of his own stomach.

"Further indications of the bull's essential selfishness are found in his frequent sullen and browbeating of all other moose that are smaller than himself. He cannot tolerate a rival, but flies into a jealous rage at the first suggestion that there is any other bull moose in the universe."

Mr. Long finds the bull moose very fond of bright lights—attracted by them, in fact. Another trait he notes—the faculty of getting a nice, soft, warm and easy-to-lie-in bed in the simple process of driving from its own some deer of lesser bulk and pugnacity.

BURNED BOOKS, TAGGART SAYS

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Thomas F. Ryan, August Belmont and Cord Meyer furnished a large proportion of the money used in conducting the Democratic Presidential campaign of 1904, according to Thomas Taggart of Indiana, as appeared as a witness before the Senate Committee investigating the campaign contributions of 1904 and 1908. Mr. Taggart, who was Chairman of the National Committee from 1904 until after the nomination of Bryan in 1908, denied personal knowledge of any contributions except his own, which he said was something like $1,000. He had learned from his associates that Ryan, Belmont and Meyer were the chief contributors of the money.

After the reorganization of the National Committee it had been perfected in 1908, Mr. Taggart said he surrendered all records to Chairman Mack but those relating to contributions, which he burned.

Taggart has resigned his membership on the Democratic National Committee after twelve years' service. He said he would take no official part in the Presidential campaign this year.

Dispatches from Indianapolis say strong pressure will be brought to bear on Taggart to induce him to recall his resignation. Governor Marshall is among those Democrats who would like to see Taggart continue on the committee.

IOWA PROGRESSIVES MAY SUPPORT T. R. AND STAY IN PARTY

DES MOINES, Ia., July 10.—Progressive Republicans in Iowa who want to support Theodore Roosevelt may do so without losing their party rights. That is the plan of the progressive today, when far outnumber the conservative delegates to the State convention. An old resolution known as the "Bad Man" resolution, will be made part of the State Republican platform. It will absolve all Republicans who refuse to support Taft. A plank supporting Roosevelt will also be part of the document, according to plans of the leaders before the convention went into session.

The "Bad Man" plank is a compromise. The radicals at first planned a resolution denouncing the Chicago convention and asking that President Taft withdraw from the race. The conservatives scored the compromise. Some of them want to carry the fight to the convention floor. If they do the progressives will retaliate with the resolution demanding that the President get out of the race.

"Face powders now offer inadequate protection. The hot sun burns and the chills of perspiration cause annoyance. Dissolve an original package of mayatone in a half-pint of witch hazel and rub a little on the face each morning. You will have a complexion protector and beautifier far superior to anything else. Mayatone will not come off and show like powder, and keeps the skin soft, fair and girlish looking.

"Many suffer from itching scalps in warm weather. A dry shampoo removes dust, dirt and excess oil; leaves the scalp clean, cool and refreshed, and the hair light, wavy and beautifully lustrous. To make a perfect shampoo powder, mix four ounces of powdered orris root with an original package of therox. Just sift a teaspoonful of this mixture on the head and brush it out thoroughly.

"Wild hairs are a disfigurement. Polish to a beautiful face. They can be easily, quickly and safely removed by the use of delatone paste. Mix powdered delatone with enough water to cover the hair, apply and after a minute or two rub off, wash the skin and the hairs will be gone.

"If the eyebrows are thin and straggly, pyrotin should be applied with fine camel's hair brush. It will stimulate the growth, and they should be brushed gently each day to train them to grow into an arch. Pyrotin will also make the lashes grow long and silky."

Marked Down

Our annual summer mark down begins today. Only twice during the year do HANAN SHOES ever show a reduction in price—and then, only when it becomes necessary to close out present season's goods in order to conform to the original Hanan policy of not carrying goods from one season to another.

The sale involves all remaining Oxfords in black and tan.

NOTE—If you have never tested the merit of HANAN SHOES—never enjoyed the comfort and satisfaction these famous shoes promote—this sale will afford an unusual opportunity.

Sale begins at 8:30 O'Clock.

TABER, BROWN, BEATS JONES

disappointment. Jones finished third, although touted as a winner.

H. Kolehmainen, the speedy Finnish runner, captured the 5,000-metre final.

Americans in the 200.

The Americans who qualified to compete in the semi-finals of the 200-metres race as follows: Redpath, Craig, Courtney, Holland, Cooke, Gerhardt, Lippincott, Meyer, Young and Wilson.

Kolehmainen's time for the 5,000 metres (three miles and 180 yards), was 14 minutes 36 3-5 seconds. Many beside Commissioner Sullivan believed the Finn had broken the world's record for two miles, but his time was not taken by the officials, but at the finish.

Jackson ran a steady race up to the stretch where, within 100 yards of the finish, he made a spurt which carried him to the front. Sheppard, whose position was next to the pole, drew ahead at the start, but could not stand the terrific pace.

At the second turn of the 1,500-metre final Von Siegel, a German, took the lead away from the American. At this the wise ones in the Stadium expressed the opinion that Sheppard was saving his strength for a spurt. On the third lap the German had to give way to Jones. A great cheer went up from the Americans as Jones flashed into first place.

Looked Like Americans.

At the third turn it looked as though the Americans had the race clinched. Kivlat was running second to Jones, moving at an even pace and apparently reserving his reserve force for the finish. Oscar Hedlund, another American, was running well to the front, while Sheppard had dropped back to fourth place. Jackson and the balance were well bunched.

At the beginning of the first stretch the young Englishman began to move up inch by inch. It was a splendid spectacle and one which thrilled the east crowd. Jones spurted in an attempt to forge ahead, but Jackson shot ahead like a projectile and pushed over the tape.

Squabble Over Places.

Jackson's victory was clean-cut, but the fight for second and third places was so close there was a squabble among the judges. First it was announced Taber had finished second and Jones third. Then this was reversed and Kivlat was given second place and Taber third.

Some of the judges protested, declaring the confusion was too great to give a fair decision. It was then decided to wait until a photograph of the runners as they flashed under the wire could be developed. In the photograph Taber, James, runner of England and Kivlat were so close together their bodies seemed like one man.

Commissioner Sullivan, who was standing at the wire, declared emphatically Taber finished second and Jones third, but the official ruling gave Kivlat second place and Taber third.

In the semi-finals of the 200-metre event the first heat was won by Ralph Craig of Detroit; D. H. Jacobs of England, second, and Ira Courtney of the Seattle A. C., third. Time—21 9-10 seconds.

All the Americans who started the 200-metre qualified for the semi-finals. It was easy work for all hands. The surprise of the day was the defeat of Ralph Rose in the shotput event. Rose was away off in form. His friends believed that his defeat was caused by the earliness of the hour at which the event was held. The shotput occurred at 9:30, which did not give Rose time to acquire his full strength.

J. Bouin was second and E. W. Hutson, England, third, in the 5,000-metre race.

The defeat of the Americans by the fleet Finish runner Kolehmainen did not cause any great surprise as the Olympic stars practically conceded defeat. The Americans who qualified for the final in the 5,000 metres were George T. Bonhag, P. J. Drew and Louis J. Scott.

The winning of this event gave Finland three more points. In the afternoon the base turned to a light rain, but the contests were continued without intermission.

Belgium defeated Hungary in the water polo contest by a score of 6 to 5.

In the plain diving competition for women, Greta Johansen of Sweden was first, with 302 points; Tisa Regnell of Sweden was second, with 341 points, and Isabelle White of England was third, with 329 points.

The American athletes made a clean sweep of everything in the final of the sixteen-pound shot put, smashing all Olympic records.

Pat McDonald's shot put was 50.52 feet. Ralph Rose of the Olympic Club, San Francisco, was second with a put of 50.03 feet. Both men broke the record, which stood at 48 feet, 7 inches.

The feature of the event, however, was the work of Lawrence A. Whitney, who won third place. Whitney is a Boston boy, a member of the B. A. A. ball team, and was on the supplemental list.

The shotput victory gave the Americans six more points.

THE SUMMARY.

Following is the summary of today's events in the Olympic games:

Miss Andrews in Casino Row Tries to Block Camera Man

Millionaire to Her Aid, But Neither Dares Touch Photographer.

NEWPORT, July 10.—Miss Margaret F. Andrews, daughter of Paul A. Andrews, several times reported engaged to W. Vincent Astor, shared with a New York newspaper photographer today the front of the stage in an exciting incident which attracted a crowd of society people at the Casino. Cheered by onlookers, Miss Andrews made strenuous objection to being "snapshotted" by the camera man and it looked for a time as if a policeman would get mixed up in the affair.

Miss Andrews had just arrived in her automobile at the Casino entrance. The photographer approached and held his camera in position. After Miss Andrews had emphatically protested, Henry A. C. Taylor, the millionaire, ran up.

"What's the matter?" he cried.

He was told the trouble.

"Society Policeman" Casey, so called because he is always detailed to "protect" society people, looked on.

"Hey there," said Taylor turning to Casey, "why don't you arrest this man?"

Casey made no reply. There were whispered threats of "camera-smashing," but not a hand was lifted. Afterward onlookers mentioned the "Sears case," in which Richard W. Sears, the AMERICAN photographer, was awarded a verdict in a suit for damages against a prominent Newport man. Sears claimed the man had broken his camera. Casey said to an AMERICAN reporter:

"When the Sears case came up I learned what the law was and that was good enough for me."

When Miss Andrews and Taylor were protesting, the camera man got his pictures.

"Thank you," he said as he walked away.

MRS. GLOVER IS COOL IN COURT

Mrs. Lillian M. Glover, the widow of Clarence F. Glover, who was murdered in Waltham, resumed the witness stand today before Judge Braley in the Superior Court, where she made an application for a share of the estate left by her husband.

Mrs. Glover wore the same dress, which she said yesterday, she had borrowed to wear to court. In spite of the heat there were many in the court room to get a glimpse of the woman who was so prominent in the trial of Hattie Le Blanc for Glover's murder.

Elbridge R. Anderson represented Samuel D. Elmore, the executor of the estate. Elmore, taking the witness stand, said that Mrs. Glovers claims on the estate amounted to $20,450.

The widow produced bills for the money she had paid out since the tragedy that deprived her of her husband. She was cross-examined at length by Mr. Anderson. She replied readily, and appeared to be the coolest person in the courtroom.

Did you ever study bookkeeping?" she was asked.

"Never," she replied.

"Did you ever have much schooling?"

"No, when I was ten years old I could not read or write. I picked it up after that."

In answer to another question Mrs. Glover said that she never knew her husband to have any money that did not come from her laundry.

At the conclusion of the case, Judge Braley reserved his decision. He asked the stenographer to furnish him with a transcript of all the evidence so that he could look it over. When his decision is reached it will be delivered in the East Cambridge court.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

While humanity perspired and wilted the truck salesmen was in his happiest mood, for "Old Sol," is demonstrating to the merchants of this town how faithfully the gasoline and electric truck stand up under the terrific heat, while "old Dobbin" is dropping exhausted in the street, or is too weak to be removed from the stable.

The terrific heat is certainly a great argument in favor of the commercial power wagon. Then in the Winter, when the streets are covered with sleet and ice, the trucks move along smoothly and silently, while horses are sprawling over the slippery pavements. The truck men have been especially alive to the trials of horses, and scores of prospects who have been hesitating have been closed up in the past few days.

* * *

Thirteen hundred and eight miles in twelve days is the record that the Alco truck gained in the first transcontinental delivery of motor freight. An average aged more than 100 miles a day, travelling often over steep hills and through roads of sand, soft earth and gumbo. The Alco has strictly adhered to its schedule, and has averaged twelve miles an hour.

It carried a complete equipment for building roads, including block and tackles, sakd boards, a windlass and other articles.

The success of this transcontinental Alco in plowing through bad roads has resulted in Charles W. Young, the owner, announcing that he will use the motor truck for interurban delivery within fifty miles of Philadelphia. Up to this time railroads have been employed. It was for this firm that the Alco truck is en route to Petaluma, Cal., with a load of merchandise.

* * *

It was a merry party o automobile experts that enjoyed the hospitality of an old friend C. F. Crittendon at his camp on Lake Nagog, Littleton, last evening. "Crit" furnished transportation both to and from the place of meeting and likewise a most enjoyable entertainment upon the arrival of the party. Every member of the party thoroughly enjoyed the outing. The party consisted of Harry Martin, J. J. Mc-Namara, T. J. Gleun, R. B. Nettleton, H. E. Parker and J. D. Murphy, and not a dull moment was experienced from the time of leaving Boston until the return. The guests voted Crittendon a royal good fellow.

SIMPLE RULES FOR KEEPING BABY COOL THIS HOT SUMMER

Do not hold them on your lap.

They do not get water enough.

Give them two tablespoonfuls of water at least twice a day.

Be sure that is the right kind of water.

Water must be boiled and kept in sterilized bottles.

Give babies plenty of fresh air.

They must be kept quiet and do not put them in dark rooms.

TROOPS TRAIL 'ENEMY' IN SUN

WEST BARNSTABLE, July 10.—Under another broiling sun the Eighth Regiment and Battery A, Field Artillery, M. V. M., started out today to repulse and shoot to pieces the imaginary "enemy" which has been intrenched in the sand hills. It was the turn of the second and third battalions to work out the attack problem, while the first battalion supported the artillery.

Unless the heat became unendurable for men and horses it was planned to follow out the same problems as the day before when the morning was spent in "feeling out" the enemy and the afternoon in actual fighting.

These manoeuvres are like real war. Real ball cartridges are used by the infantry. The field artillery bangs away with full charges of shrapnel. But the only victims of the deadly fusillades are the official targets and the enduring sand hills.

There is an historical interest in the locality. In the War of 1812 the British troops landed in this territory in an effort to capture the salt works.

Today the imaginary enemy is supposed to have landed just back of the railroad station in strong force and to have entrenched itself soldily in the hills overlooking the town.

The "enemy" is represented by bulloons the size of a man's head, which float at the ends of wires. The wires are, of course, to keep the "enemy" down to the ground. The coming generation may sight in the air, but this game is being fought out on the ground.

The first day of the infantry became evident when a count showed thirteen out of sixteen balloons punctured. The artillery handled its guns cleverly, too. One target was blown to shreds.

DO YOU WISH YOU WERE A BOY AGAIN? You certainly will when you read about what the youngsters are doing this Summer out in their BLUE HILLS camp, in Sunday's AMERICAN.

ELDRIDGE DIVORCE WAS KEPT SECRET

Though Mrs. Mary Judson Eldridge of Needham secured a divorce from Chauncey Eldridge last year, the fact has only just become known through the vesting of the decree impounding the papers.

Mr. Eldridge is a member of the banking firm of Tucker, Anthony & Co., of Boston, director in the Binghamton Light, Heat & Power Company, director of the Cortez Associated Mines, treasurer and director of the Hartford & Springfield Street Railway Company, and director of the Manchester Traction Company. He is also a member of many organizations and a large stockholder in many corporations.

HOODOO CAR IN BEACH ACCIDENT

Employes on the Nantasket branch of the New Haven Railroad call attention today to the fact that the hoodoo motor car of the branch was drawing the train which was wrecked near Paragon Park, injuring eighteen passengers and shaking up others.

The hoodoo motor is No. 3305. It has an evil repute among the railroad men on the electric branch.

Earlier in the Summer it ran into a string of cars at Nantasket Junction and pushed some of them off the rails.

On June 29 Conductor George Orcutt was killed by this motor car. The third accident of the season, the one near Paragon Park, only increases the reputation of 3305 as a hoodoo.

The cause of the accident is given as excessive speed on a curve, resulting in spreading rails. But the railroad men note the fact that it had to be the hoodoo motor which figured in the wreck.

CAMBRIDGE PLANS A TRADE CARNIVAL

The Cambridge Board of Trade has voted to hold a merchants' week or carnival similar to that of last year. There will be exhibits by manufacturers at the State Armory and a carnival by the retail merchants of the Board of Trade.

ONE TERRIBLE SIGHT WITH SKIN TROUBLE

Whole Body Broke Out in Red Spots, Formed Big Sores. Awful Suffering. Could Not Sleep. Burned and Itched. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in Three Weeks.

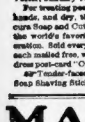
442 East 103rd St., Carnegie, N. Y.—"The trouble began some months back, when my whole body began to break out into little red spots, which gradually formed into great big sores when I scratched it and turned all blue. I was affected from head to foot and also my hands and arms. I looked one terrible sight. It caused awful suffering, and I could not sleep for three or four nights at a time. It seemed to burn and itch so that I thought I should go mad. One of my friends would say, 'Rub well with vinegar'; another, 'Use sulphur and lard'; but nothing seemed to help me.



"One day looking through a paper I came across an advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, so I bought them at once. I would take a bath in warm water using the Cuticura Soap, then use the Cuticura Ointment, which gave me instant relief. At the end of three weeks I was entirely cured of the disease." (Signed) George Venne, January 17, 1912.

For treating poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have been the world's favorites for more than a generation. Sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Women Win $50 for Pictures

Ten Caught by Camera Paid

Snapshotted Shoppers Visit American Office and Get $5 Each.

Astonishment! Surprise! Wonderment! There were a few of the expressions yesterday of ten Boston women shoppers who called at the AMERICAN Promotion Department. Each of the women received $5 for their trouble.

Fifty dollars paid yesterday to Boston shoppers!

And why? Just because these ten women watched the AMERICAN faithfully from day to day.

And what's it all about? It's all about the fact that the AMERICAN has taken up the cudgels in defence of the "styles" of Boston women shoppers.

A staff of photographers has been delegated to the task of circulating all about Boston shopping district on the first three days of each week. The cameras have no favorites and the films constantly are capturing Boston "styles"—hundreds every day—for reproduction in the evening and Sunday AMERICAN.

On the first three days of last week hundreds of Boston shoppers were snapped. On Monday and Tuesday of this week and again today these men have taken and are taking pictures here, there and everywhere—all around the shopping district.

Twenty of these pictures will be reproduced in the AMERICAN—one each day in the Evening AMERICAN and fourteen in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

For every woman whose picture is printed, either in the Evening or Sunday AMERICAN, $5 is waiting at the AMERICAN Office.

$5 AWAITS HER

Any woman whose picture is printed has but to don the clothing worn when the picture was taken and come to the AMERICAN Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop square, where a $5 gold piece will be handed to her as a slight recognition of her part in deciding this vexed question.

Watch the AMERICAN, evening and Sunday!

If you wear shopping Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday of this week, or if you went shopping on these same days last week, your picture may appear any day, and when it does you will be $5 richer.

If the wrong whose picture is printed today will call as directed she will receive $5.

FANEUIL HALL MEAT DEBATE

A mass meeting of the kosher meat strikers of Boston and suburbs will be held in Faneuil Hall tonight at 8 o'clock. The high price of meat will be discussed by prominent speakers, and a plan of action will be decided upon. The leaders say the strike, or boycott, is still on in full force.

The kosher butcher shops in Malden, the West End and other suburbs failed to open today. The police were on the watch in the troubled districts, but there was no outbreak.

The kosher dealers declare they will open their shops tomorrow.

The speakers at the meeting tonight will be Mrs. Eva Hoffman, president of the Mothers' Protective Association; Mrs. Fleischeln, leader of the Malden strikers; Mrs. Charlotte Smith, president of the Women's Homestead Association, and Mr. Philip Davis of the Civic Service House.

MANY FROM BAY STATE AT ST. JOHN FOR CELEBRATION

ST. JOHN, N. B., July 10.—This city is crowded with visitors for the Old Home Week celebration. The Boston boats brought in nearly 1,000 passengers and the trains have been crowded. Many have arrived from New England points.

Among the visitors from the United States points registered at the Board of Trade rooms are: H. A. Perry, Dorchester; Mary Howard, Weymouth; Amelia White, Worcester; N. A. Mosher, Charles Eliot, Boston; Mrs. Mary E. Langton, George Belyea, Roxbury; George O'Connor, L. S. Burpee, W. C. Catsmann, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Raub, Boston; Alice L. Hamilton, Charlestown; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Fortunee, Framingham; P. F. Dunlap, Cambridge; Mrs. Edward Rolston and Roberta Rolston, Roxbury; Mr. and Mrs. George S. Parker, Westboro; C. M. Cougle, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Baxter, Winthrop; Miss Margaret Waterworth, Lilly Hopwood, May Waterworth, New Bedford; Maud A. Miles, Dorchester; James T. O'Neill, Dover, N. H.

SECRET CLEWS IN GIRL'S DEATH

NEW YORK, July 10.—The city's best detectives, after following every lead possible, are working on the theory that the murderer of twelve-year-old Julia Connors, whose body was found in a vacant lot last Sunday, lives in the neighborhood of her home at No. 3872 Third avenue. Plain clothes men surround the blocks between One Hundred and Seventy-first street and One Hundred and Seventy-third street and Third and Fulton avenues to prevent any one entering or leaving without undergoing scrutiny. Day and night they will be kept there until these is an arrest or until they abandon hope of clearing up the mystery.

The police are believed to have clews they have withheld. Whether the person who slashed the girl and threw her body into the lot is an elderly man or a youth the police are undecided.

RICHESON COUNSEL/ LEE IN COURT FIGHT; PAYS A FINE OF $25

LYNCHBURG, July 10.—John J. Lee, who was chief counsel for Clarence V. T. Richeson, the Boston clergyman who was electrocuted for the murder of Avis Linnell, engaged in a fist fight in court here with Duncan Drysdale, another lawyer.

The clash was preceded by an exchange of epithets in which the words "crook" and "shyster" occurred. Lee had a tumbler in his hand and he made a lash for Drysdale. Getting Drysdale's head under his arm, Lee proceeded to batter it with the tumbler.

Drysdale got the worst of the encounter, his face being severely cut. Lee was fined $25, which he paid.

PLANT'S YACHT GETS BY HEALTH BOARD

PORTLAND, Me., July 10.—Morton Plant's racing schooner Elena was given a clean bill of health, after being fumigated, by the local health officials, when she put into port here with what was thought to be a mild case of diphtheria on board. The yacht was on the annual cruise of the Eastern Yacht Club. The Elena planned to remain the remainder of the day at Bar Harbor. The man supposed to have diphtheria was treated and allowed to go on with the cruise.

CALL CORTELYOU IN CAMPAIGN INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, July 10.—George B. Cortelyou, formerly Secretary of the Treasury, now head of Consolidated Gas, and Republican campaign chairman in 1904, has been asked to appear Friday to testify before the Senate committee regarding campaign subscriptions of that year.

PAYS $36,225 FOR KANG-HE PORCELAIN

LONDON, July 10.—The fifth day of the sale of art objects of the John Edward Taylor collection at Christies brought $272,918. This sum brings the grand total to $1,602,918.

The record for any single piece of porcelain fell when Durreen Brothers gave $36,225 for a famille verte vase of the Kang-He period.

CONTINUED HEAT CAUSES ANXIETY FOR POPE PIUS

ROME, July 10.—The continued heat wave is having a serious effect on the health of Pope Pius X. Both Dr. Petacci and Dr. Marchia Fava are admittedly anxious over the Pontiff's condition.

The Pope, always highly nervous during warm weather, is particularly irritable at the present time, and has continually disregarded the physicians' orders to rest. As a result the doctors fear that a general breakdown may come.

"I AM INNOCENT," ASSERTS ARCHBALD

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Judge Archbald, through counsel, has denied all charges against him and declared his innocence of any wrong doing. A statement just issued asks that public opinion be suspended until the accused jurist has had an opportunity to present his defence to the Senate, which, sitting as a court, will try the charges against him.

Consideration of the Archbald impeachment resolution in the House will be resumed tomorrow.

THERESE E. ISELIN TO WED DIPLOMAT

NEW YORK, July 10.—Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Therese E. Iselin, daughter of Adrian Iselin, of this city, to Irwin B. Laughlin, son of the late Mayor George M. Laughlin, of Pittsburgh, for ten years a member of the American diplomatic service. Miss Iselin, whose city home is at No. 711 Fifth avenue, is now at her father's country place in New Rochelle. Mr. Laughlin is secretary of the American Embassy at Berlin.

BOSTON HEALTH STANDS THE TEST OF TORRID WAVE

Boston's health is remarkably good in the hot weather, according to the health board. Not for years have there been so few scares of contagious disease reported as at present, and illness usually directly attributed to hot weather is unusually slight. In the hottest week of last Summer there were 375 deaths. Last week there were but 196.

Mark Down Sale

It isn't for a day or a week, or any other specified time, but will continue until we have disposed of our entire summer stock of Good Clothes, Hats and Furnishings right down to bare racks and shelves.

While it is our policy to effect a complete clearance each season so that not a stitch of merchandise shall be carried over, we never try to hedge by letting our stock get low or lines broken before markdown time. We keep our range of sizes and assortment of patterns at each price complete and our whole stock at high-water mark right up to July 4th—then mark every thing down, no matter how new or desirable it may be.

Consequently, in spite of the large volume of business done during the first few days of this sale, our tremendous stock and wide variety of styles insure an excellent selection for many days to come—better, in fact, than most stores offer at the height of the season. Nor—on the other hand—is there any advantage in delay, for there are no choice lots being held in reserve. You have unrestricted choice of anything in the store at these lowprices.

RILEY'S COLUMN

BAUMGARTNER, the young New England League pitcher who was hailed as a second "Marty" O'Toole, made a fatal mistake in the last inning of the second game of the St. Louis series when he failed to pass up Tris Speaker. After Carrigan had gone out, O'Brien spilled a single into right field. Then Hooper went out and it looked dubious for the Red Sox. But Yerkes delivered a single into right, placing O'Brien on second.

* * *

UNDER the circumstances—with men on first and second and two out—it was up to Baumgartner to pass such a man as Speaker and play for Lewis, who was an easier man. The fact that passing Speaker put three men on bases meant nothing because but one run was needed to win, and any hit would score it, whether third base were occupied or not, and two were out. Instead, Baumgartner "plays for the batter" and "Spoke" hit the first ball pitched for a single to centre, scoring O'Brien and winning the baseball game.

* * *

THE delightful feature of this baseball game was that it signalized the continued improvement of "Buck" O'Brien. "Buck" held the Browns to seven hits and he showed that he had regained his control when, in the eighth, Baumgartner tripled with none out and the score tied and "Buck" O'Brien and the Red Sox infield, playing together, put the next three men out of business without a chance for the Brownie pitcher to trot home.

* * *

SHOTTEN, the terror of the Red Sox, opened the contest with a home run and that was what gave the Brownies a hope of beating the American League leaders. Three safe hits and a passed ball scored a run in the fourth, but, aside from that, St. Louis was in O'Brien's grip all of the time.

* * *

THE Senators from Washington put over a double-header yesterday and crept up a bit on the Red Sox. While the Sox have apparently disposed of the Athletics, it gave them the horrors all of the time to notice that Clark Griffith's wonders are right behind them and always "knocking at the door."

* * *

JAKE STAHL kept in the class of the wonder "fence buster," also the "strike-out kid" by slamming out a two-bagger, which should have been good for three bases, in the second, and a three-bagger, which should have been a homer, in the third. On his next two appearances at the plate Stahl struck out.

* * *

STEVE YERKES justified his job by hitting safely three times in five appearances at bat, one of his drives being a double on which he finally scored, and another prolonging the game until Speaker could drive in the winning run.

* * *

WITH two games under their belt, the Red Sox will start out today to clean up the St. Louis series in decisive fashion. They have effectually disposed of the Athletics—at least for a time—and now need a little trouble in Washington to put them on an easy seat.

CAN STAHL RUN? JUST WATCH HIM!

Did you ever see an impatient team of truck horses hitched to one of those big yellow carts that look like a seventh heaven to the kids start off down the street?

If there is a lamp post anywhere the ice wagon hits it. The water plugs go, every stray pedestrian on either side of the street, has to climb porches to get out of the way and there is a fuss, generally, until one of the rear wheels trips to either Bunker Hill monument.

There is an uproar like a battle, and you imagine a hundred must be killed. But nobody is injured. When you figure it out, the net speed of the outfit is never much faster than a mile in ten minutes. Yet, somehow, the ice wagon team gets there.

That's the way Jake Stahl runs.

He "swipes" at the ball. He swings with everything there is in that six feet two-and-a-half, and 195 pounds of beef. When he connects, he has usually swung himself so far around that he looks like he intended to try a left-handed "swipe" on the way back.

He Has to Unwind.

His right leg becomes twined around his left leg, and he is pointing backwards, so he can't see where the ball went.

Somebody yells. That means that Jake has "hit 'er out." He begins the laborious task of unwinding himself and then hikes for first. It is such an awkward job that Jake usually runs out ten feet or more towards the pitcher before he gets fairly under way.

From that time on he follows the road of the runaway ice wagon. He's as "busy" as the clattering team—and as graceful.

Two fair examples of how he does it were given in the opening game of the St. Louis series.

In the first inning, Jake slammed a sizzler down the third base line. It looked like a sure two-bagger. But Jake ran one-third of the way to the pitcher's box before he could get straightened out for first base, and there he had to stop.

Later he hit one to Laporte. His back was in full square view of the pitcher after the slam. He unwound himself like a pigeon does before its flight and finally got away, under full sail, from a point about fifteen feet in front of the plate.

How He Moved Along.

He ran like—well, he covered ten feet at every stride. He went like a steam roller with gasoline engines. Laporte threw a bit wide to first and Kutina got the ball. Jake came down on the Brownie first baseman like a runaway ice wagon. Kutina was fixed in his tracks. He was dazed with fright and surprise. Jake grabbed him firmly by both shoulders—one in each big mitt—used him as a pivot to swing around first base, bumped into Umpire Sheridan, who was trying to get out of the way, but, like the pedestrian and the ice wagon, did not know which way was out of the way; first tried to circle and then collided with Laporte, but grabbed Laporte by the neck so as not to upset him and then ran like a madman, full tilt, into Pratt, who stood on second base.

Not a soul was hurt, and it is doubtful if any other runner—barring a few speed marvels—would have progressed any further than Stahl did.

The point is: Jake was going all the time. After he was well under way he couldn't stop. And he got there, somehow—just like the ice wagon.

RED SOX MEET BROWNS AGAIN

The Red Sox will have the Browns to contend them again today at Fenway Park and Manager Stahl is prepared to make up another win. The Browns are going for the Red Sox to trim this season the Highlanders are.

Jack Hugh Bedient is the likely choice this afternoon.

Yesterday's contest was a hummer. The Browns put up a superb all-round ball game, giving Baumgartner grand support, as the score showed. Boston got twelve safe drives, which means that it must have taken extra fine fielding to keep the Speed Boys down to nine runs.

O'Brien was forced to pitch for all that was in him, right up to the last man, and he turned in a fine day's work, as the others had men on bases in six of the nine innings.

Bedient, the first man to face O'Brien, lined the ball to the bleachers for a liner. The second St. Louis run was the result of Yerkes' fumble and singles by Laporte and Alton. This tied the score. Kutina having made two runs in the last on a double by Yerkes, Speaker's single and Jake Stahl's triple.

It was the tenth straight victory for Jason over the St. Louis boys, and the 19th best game of the series.

PILGRIMS AFTER REVENGE TODAY

ST. LOUIS, July 10.—The Boston Pilgrims and Cardinals will continue their battle in the cellar championship series this afternoon.

So far the Cardinals have the advantage. Yesterday they compelled the visitors to submit to a double dozed defeat.

Inability to couple tight pitching with the batting and batting with tight pitching was the cause of the double reverse. Even then the clangs of King would have secured an even break but for two wild heaves right in succession in the ninth frame of the second matinee.

MIKE BROWN LOSES.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Charley Harvey of Philadelphia outpointed Mike Brown of Boston in their ten-round bout at the Atlas A. C. The bout was fast and exciting throughout.

Murphy of Athletics Out for the Season

PHILADELPHIA, July 10.—Dan Murphy will smash no more base hits for the Athletics this season. The captain and the team's heaviest hitting outfielder has such a case of water on the knee that he is physically incompetent to get into another game this year. It is possible that his playing days are over for all time.

"Connie" Mack, wearing a serious face, admitted the facts today. "It is no use concealing the truth," he said. "'Dan' is lost to us for the season. It's a great blow, for we need him in our present adversity."

AMATEUR GAMES.

The Norwood Civic Association still has a few open dates and is anxious to arrange games with any fast team going reasonable inducements. Most play away from home. Minute Boys of Lexington, Alpine A. C. of Roslindale and Notre Dame of Roxbury, please note. Manager John W. Kennedy, No. 417 Nahatan street, Norwood.

The Roger Wolcott A. A. of Dorchester would like to arrange games with fast teams in New England [illegible] reasonable guarantee. Address Manager Joseph Hopkins, No. 17 Edwin street, Dorchester. Telephone 1280-4 after 6 p. m.

The Athletic League, corner, would like to arrange games to finish the season with some fast [illegible] baseball team. He was formerly with the Somerton, Principios, Hawthorne and Cambridge [illegible] and if there [illegible] is unable to play. Address Station A, General Delivery, South End.

GET BUSY FOR WORLD SERIES

The AMERICAN'S baseball contest starts Saturday and it is up to every fan to make the run for one of the twenty free trips to the World's series games.

The contest is open to every man, woman, boy or girl in New England. It is open to out-of-town residents as well as those who live in Boston or Massachusetts.

The time to enter is NOW.

The way to enter is to be nominated.

The way to be nominated is to fill out the little nomination slip printed on another page of today's AMERICAN and mail it to the Contest Editor, Boston AMERICAN, No. 5 Winthrop square.

You can nominate yourself by simply signing your name on the coupon blank and sending it in. If for any reason you may not be able to take the trips yourself, then fill in the name of some friend of yours who would be able to enjoy it and send in the blank.

That will start you in the contest with 1,000 votes to your credit. Provided you get your nomination blank in before next Saturday.

This special vote credit will not be given after Friday noon.

The wise fans aren't going to let this chance of free trips to the world's series slip away from them.

The first coupon in the contest will appear next Saturday and will count for and have a value of twenty-five votes.

The second coupon, which will appear next Sunday, will count for and have a value of fifty votes. These two days special value coupons will be given as an acknowledgment for prompt nomination. The regular value of the votes will be two votes daily up to ten votes Sunday.

Those who start here are very likely to have the jump on the late comers, and this is as it should be.

NOTRE DAMES SEEK SATURDAY GAME

The speedy Notre Dames of Roxbury are without a game for Saturday and would like to arrange a contest away from home with some fast eighteen-year-old team. The Notre Dames have made an enviable record this season, winning nine straight games. Address all challenges to George Grimm, No. 6 Highland Park, Roxbury.

The Roxbury Specials also have a few open dates. They are ready to meet any eighteen-year-old team. Address Tommy Murphy, No. 2 Lewis Park, Roxbury.

GOLF BODIES IN BITTER WAR

The differences of opinion, in fact, the breach between the Western Golf association is not being helped any by the proposal of the W. G. A. to run their amateur championship, which starts next Monday at Denver, Colo.; under the rules of the game as approved by the Royal and Ancient Golf club of St. Andrews, Scotland.

In the announcement of this championship meeting no mention is made of any allegiance to the U. S. G. A., and the committee intend to run this year's meeting as above, with such ground rules as they may choose to announce.

The Western body are introducing other innovations, too. Instead of the whole field qualifying in a digger the first day there will be a one-round qualification, from which the sixty-four survivors will be picked. On the following day these players will play thirty-six holes, the best thirty two qualifying for the championship p

Getting On In Life

NO. 11—THE PLEASURES OF LIFE

By THOMAS TAPPER

I

WHEN William Cobbett was trying to learn English in the barracks room, his companions were taunting and brawling and making a noise. This means that Cobbett was seeking pleasure in learning something, and the others were seeking it in idleness—opposite means for the same end, in the same room, and at the same time.

One of the most popular books of the last twenty years was written by Sir John Lubbock. It has for its two words at the head of this article. Lubbock was a banker, a scientist and a member of the British Parliament. His principal political interest lay in financial and educational subjects. He filled many important offices and was, in the broadest sense, a man of the world.

In naming the real pleasures of life he selects twenty-three things. There are the names of things beyond the reach of circumstances that you can buy with a check.

He places at the head of the list: Health, next duty. Money will buy neither. Then books, which money will buy, but money alone will not buy them wisely. Then come friends and love. Money buys acquaintances, but not friends. And all the gold in the National Treasury cannot buy a man Time. Then come home science and education. Many a home has been made by love without money, and many a poor creature has learned science and gotten an education without a penny.

Millions Pray Like Midas

Next he places Ambition. Can a man beat that? Then comes Wealth? This, at least, seems to be something worth while, we think. Here is a real Pleasure of Life. His judgment of it is best enjoyed in the fable of Midas. Midas prayed one day that everything he touched might be changed into gold. Millions of others have done the same thing and are doing it today. But Midas happened to pray when the gods were listening, and they granted Midas his wish. His wine turned to gold, his bread, his clothes. Everything that the touch of his hand fell upon was another answer to his wish.

This may be called a legally successful prayer. But Midas soon saw the folly of it. He walks into the market place to buy an orange. He gives the dealer a piece of his cane of gold, of course, in exchange for the fruit; takes the fruit in his hand and as soon as it touches his flesh, it has become a round and shining lump of gold.

In order to avoid chewing nuggets Midas had to be fed by some other hand than his own.

Well, so much for Wealth as a pleasure in life. It can be overrated. Then comes Health, Love, Art and Poetry, Music and Nature. Midas with his gold could not touch one of these, but the moment any of them is not to be had for gold.

Then come the Treasures of Life. Money buys them in plenty. And for the end Labor, Religion, Progress and Death.

Few titles, you see, in all this list, are material things like horses, houses, tan shoes and pretzels. The best of them are immaterial things like Happiness, Duty, Love and Destiny.

II

To Get Real Pleasures

An interesting fact about money and material things is this: Money will buy them at any market. But a still more interesting fact is that the pleasures that are locked up in the material things, as Friendship, Ambition and the love of Nature, can not only not be bought by money, but we must begin to store them up early in life or we can never have them.

The most pitiful thing in life is the landscape is a rich man, say about sixty, tired of making money, and yet with no mental power to enjoy the real pleasures of life. He thinks he will go around and see the wonders of the Old World. It means him just as tired to travel in Europe as it does in America. When he stands before the wonders of the Old World they are not wonders to him, because he does not understand them.

He may think that European travel will open his eyes. When he gets at it, the first thing he discovers is folly. He cannot get away from himself. That rich old man of sixty digs his footsteps everywhere. In brief, he has himself with him all the time.

Has he made a mistake in becoming wealthy?

He has not.

His mistake lies in having become wealthy only.

Money is a great thing, but the stuff it is made of troubled Midas terribly.

A model made up of "faked" hyacinth bells that you would wager are real.

A HAT OF MOSS ROSES. THE ROSES ARE MUSLIN, BUT THE MOSS IS REAL, WITH A GREEN DYE OVER IT TO KEEP IT FROM WITHERING.

Real ferns under net. A clever bit of "nature faking" that is very popular.

By OLIVETTE

OUTSIDE of fiction, the greatest nature faker in the world are the modern milliners.

Bee-hive hats that fool the very bees themselves, crush caps that seem to have just come off the flower rack in the bathroom, blue roses and green carnations, imitation beetles, butterflies, birds, and even snakes; ferns from the woods, acorns and stuffed mice: all these things adorn Mrs. Lady's bonnet, and the fact that these hats are quite beautiful to look upon shows that the millinery nature faker knows his business.

His business, not hers. Millinery is going over into the hands of the men, and the man milliner is not a new fly now more.

The hats on this page were designed by an instructor of the art, who teaches classes of trimmers and designers all over the country.

Mr. Orn Cone could construct a hat out of an old frying pan, and nothing that he sees is safe from his deft and ingenious fingers, which transformed the wash rag into a hat, and the kitchen colander into a new design for fashionable bonnets.

One of these hats is made of moss roses, the roses being genuine imitation of muslin, while the moss is nature-faked coming from the woods, but getting a bath in a green dyeing pot before it reached my lady's hat. Another bit of good faking is the blue hyacinth bells wound round the other model, and the real ferns under net, and on a background of velvet which forms the facing of a big straw hat, trimmed with roses.

Nature faking on hats knows no bounds. The sparrow's humble plumage forms the body of the bird of paradise, and the unassuming goose wing is spotted and striped and called eagle's feathers.

A French model of thick yellow velvet forms a little tight skull cap, fitting closely to the head; around the edge of this is coiled a spotted snake, and you have to look twice to see that the reptile is made of palliettes, and that it snuggles under a bunch of marabou feathers, carefully taken from the chicken and glued on to fine fibrous stems. Nobody knows who is who or what is what in the millinery corn and fauna. Bees and butterflies are often fooled by modern muslin flowers, especially when they are arranged with ferns, wheat and oats and other natural trimmings.

A pretty fad is that of perfuming the flowers on hats, giving to each flower its natural perfume. The fragrance of a bunch of sweet peas is wafted toward one by the girl with the hat going to be moles or minks, but undeniably plain hat crowned with those dainty and exquisitely fashioned buds.

As for animals, some of them are safe from the millinery nature faker's eagle eye and grasping hand. But sometimes even they will overstep themselves.

In the late spring a beautiful woman was sitting in a box at the theatre, accompanied by an unassuming man, who felt with pride that his companion was the loveliest woman in the house. It seemed quite natural that all eyes should be turned toward her, but after the second act he became unpleasantly conscious that his companion was not being admired. He looked her over with critical care and was horror-struck when he gazed above her wondrous eyes to the brim of her large hat to see that it was adorned by a simple wreath of furry mice, or animals of similar proportion, probably meant to be moles or minks, but undeniably plain mice. He left the theatre hurriedly, and the lady still wonders what has happened to her beau.

The new models for Fall millinery are severely simple, and a return of the old-fashioned collar in felt, velvet and plush, and small hats that look like derbies, with rolling brims, is predicted. These latter hats are very becoming and made in dark shades of velvet, plush and satin. They will undoubtedly have a tremendous vogue. A bunch of small ostrich feathers, marabou or osprey is respectfully fixed to one side very far in front of the hat. The wing shades, red and purple are to be among the favorite colors.

Many French women have taken to wearing their hair short—that is, clipping it off around the face and ears, and arranging it in curls. This mode of coiffure calls for close-fitting caps or hats of the carriage style of hat, and we may expect many more of these.

These Are Ice Cream Days

But You Must Look Sharp If You Want to Get the Pure and Genuine Article

By Garrett P. Serviss

This shows how the fat globules of cream in its natural state appear under a microscope.

A TYPICAL STREET SCENE.

WHO does not remember her, or his, July. It is mixed in a double sense, first, in that it carries some degree of danger, if it is too rapidly eaten, especially where one is greatly heated; and secondly, because the universal spirit of fraud and falsification has seized upon this Summer dish, this delight of children and young persons, and made it a means of putting more dishonest money into rapacious pockets.

Fortunately, genuine ice cream, made of pure materials, in a cleanly way, is nutritious as well as cooling in its effects and offers no danger, provided only, as already remarked, that it is taken slowly, and when one is not in an overheated state. In France a small dish of ice cream, taken at the end of a meal, is popularly believed to be an aid to digestion. Perhaps doctors would not subscribe to that particular opinion—I do not know—but, at any rate, there are plenty of doctors who eat ice cream.

Misplaced Confidence

One might think, if he had a great deal of confidence in the fundamental goodness of human nature, that the adulterators and substitutors would have avoided introducing their mean and dishonest, and sometimes no less than satanic, methods of quick money getting in the manufacture and sale of a dish which offers a common pleasure to rich and poor alike, and which is most in demand at just that season when all mankind feel drawn together in the sympathy that comes from bearing a common burden. But such confidence, as Dr. Wiley shows, and as we all know, would be misplaced. The spirit of greed is never ashamed, if it can do its deeds of darkness in a secret corner.

The genuine virtue of ice cream resides in the CREAM. Cream is derived from the fat particles of pure, fresh milk. Anything else that goes under the name of cream is a fraud, and it is not less a fraud even if it be innocuous. Cream, if it is to retain its best qualities, should not be used more than twenty-four hours after it is separated from the milk. When the cream is frozen, to make ice cream, it should be sweetened with SUGAR, and flavored, says Dr. Wiley, with some NATURAL, HARMLESS material. That appears to be all there is of genuine ice cream. The formula is plain and simple.

Luckily for consumers, there is a great deal of ice cream on the market, but unluckily for some of them there is also a great deal that is fraudulent. Much of this may not be absolutely dangerous—the adulterators have no wish to kill their customers, for that would be killing the goose that lays the golden eggs. But good cream, and nothing but cream; and good sugar and nothing but sugar; and natural, harmless flavoring materials, and nothing else, make up a combination which, although it is delicious and wholesome, is at the same time costly. Not too costly, mark, for those who are content with a moderate return on their money, but ALTOGETHER TOO COSTLY for those who want to "get rich quick."

Do we have "ice cream" which is made up of starch, gelatin, skim milk, antique eggs and coal tar dye. Probably it will not kill you if you eat it. BUT YOU WILL BE ROBBED JUST THE SAME. If a dealer sells you such stuff under the name of ice cream, and charges the price of ice cream for it, although it has cost him much less, what standing could he have in a court of real justice? Let it appears that he may have a very solid standing indeed in some of the so-called courts of justice which now exist. At least that is what I gather from the following statement of Dr. Wiley:

"In a case brought in the District of Columbia by the health officer against the manufacturer of a debased ice cream, which had a very low content of butter fat and a very high content of bacteria, and which contained a thickener to make it hold up for an indefinite period, testimony was given to the effect that ice cream could be properly made without having either milk or cream in it, and the judge of the court upheld this theory and refused to apply the standards which have been fixed by the Department of Agriculture under the authority of Congress."

A Better Decision.

However, it is reassuring to be informed that a Federal Court Judge in Cincinnati has since then upheld the standards as legal. More strength to that good Federal Judge's arm, will be the sentiment of all lovers of ice cream.

Dr. Wiley tells you all about the "dubious" kinds of ice cream and what they contain, and all about what real ice cream is, and about the law that some over-candnest persons have thought would suffice to protect the innocent public in this matter—and this is just the time to read all that. But don't let anything that you read dissuade you from eating ice cream when you feel like it—only make sure that you are getting exactly what you pay for. And if you can't be sure of that, then make your own ice cream, which is not so very difficult.

DEPENDABLE SECRETS OF BEAUTY AND HEALTH

OILY STRINGY HAIR. An ideal shampoo for oily hair is made by dissolving a teaspoonful of ordinary borax in a cup hot water. LYSANDER JOHN'S DEFINITION

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

LYSANDER JOHN takes such innocent delight in compiling modern definitions of words and expressions that he has run out of receipted bills and old envelopes on which to write them, and has begun on the wall paper in his room.

He is not the first man, moreover, who Lelieves the wall paper should be put to some use, nor is he the first man who objects to the expenses of buying something on which to scrat h matches.

In a little, timid hand, he has written the following on his bedroom wall:

Machine—Those who have never worked use it instead of "car" or "automobile." Those who have known drudgery never use it. It sounds too much like early Monday morning.

The black sheep of the family—The one who was the pet as a lamb.

Home, Sweet Home—A song that makes every one look sad. The homeless because they haven't a home, and those who have homes because they don't suit them.

Debutante—Common'y used in big cities to describe young society girls. In country towns the people are not sure if it is a mind or cheese.

Sleeping in the Valley so Sweet—Very pretty and not improper, though every cemetery I ever saw was perched on top of a hill.

Like a Cake of Soap

Ho kmark—Something a woman keeps between the pages of heavy and uplift literature on the parlor table, and which is never used on light literature for the reason that after she begins on light literature she never stops till she gets through.

Ambition—Every young man has too much of it, but it soon dwindles away like a cake of soap. By the time a man reaches seventy he can't recall that he ever had any in the tub.

A Friend—One who tells you when you are drowning that if you had taken his advice you would have learned how to swim long ago.

Blood-hound—Like dog that is supposed to track a villain. As no bloodhound ever located a villain no one knows if it would eat the villain when it caught him, or sit on him and hold him. Largely mythical.

Handiness—Different varieties. One kind is that a tearful and sympathetic woman knows when she arrives at a funeral and finds she left her handkerchief at home.

Red—Taut color of hair on a man's head that is called auburn or bronze when on the head of a woman.

Puny—Descriptive of a child whose parents are poor. If the parents are wealthy, "delicate" or "delicate" is considered better form.

Erroneously Applied

One foot in the grave—Always erroneously used when applied to a widower, for the reason that he is apt to pull it out any moment, put a yellow shoe on it and go courting.

Gentleman of leisure—One who has time to attend to his corns in the morning.

A Whirligig of Time

Bobby—Ain't it funny, mamma?

Mamma—What, dear?

Bobby—Why today will be yesterday to-morrow.

Present "Time"

Prison Visitor—Don't you ever regret your past?

Hardened Convict—No; it's the present that worries me most.

EYELASHES AND EYEBROWS Can Also Be Made Beautiful

Without beautiful eyes, no one is really beautiful. While eyes are thought to make the attractive by eyes that please or appear forceful. Without strong eyes no one can enjoy life to the utmost. Those whose eyes are weak and who have to wear glasses are greatly handicapped in life's race.

Through the wonderful discovery and free advice of Dr. Edward Jackson, formerly of Denver, but now of Los Angeles, more than 100,000 people in the United States have discovered that the cause of weak eyes, sore eyes, eyestrain, failing sight, cataracts and the need of glasses in most cases is a weakened condition of the eye muscles. Dr. Jackson has published a little book telling how to strengthen eyes by simple home methods. Many who have worn glasses for years have been able to discard them entirely. Others report that they can read fine print without glasses after using Dr. Jackson's simple method for a few weeks. Many who have had cataracts developing have had the progress of the disease entirely checked. Thousands of others have had eyes restored to perfect health and strength. Dr. Jackson's book is entitled "How to Get Well." It also explains how to secure long, silky eyelashes and beautiful eyebrows. Readers who write Dr. Edward Jackson, 1328 Sunbeam Building, Los Angeles, Cal., will receive a free copy of this book by return mail. Dr. Jackson's free offer is genuine and reliable. ## The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I WAS talking to a swell fellow from out West the other day," said the Manicure Lady, belligerently, "and you better not ever had. The first slap I ever saw of you trying to boss me would mean either one of two things: I would have to choose between beating you with this handsome cut glass finger bowl or making my exit forever from this shop. I might take the former course at that. Cut glass is awful heavy, and a bowl is kind of effective and easy to throw straight.

"But as I was saying, I couldn't help thinking that it would be kind of nice to marry a nice Western man. I was telling father and mother about it last night, and the old geut said that it wouldn't be a bad idea for me to wait till some Western man proposed marriage first. The way he said it, George, seemed to me that he thought there was about as much chance of a Western man proposing to me as there is of brother Wilfred getting a steady job. I didn't tell the old gent the real truth, George, because ever since he quit licking up bichloralls father has become a awful cynic. In the old days, when he had his regular sessions at Gallagher's and Sam Duffy's, father was a gent that would remind you for all the world of a frog in a pond of sunshine. Why, George, it used to seem to mother and me that when he came through the door there would be a fringe of bright sunlight all around him. Now he makes one of Tom Powers' Glooms look like a Joy.

"But if he had been good-natured I could have told him that this swell Western fellow that I have just been telling you about actually did propose to me. He has a fine ranch out in Arizona, and honest to goodness, George, if you could have saw the dashkrid that he showed when he paid me for getting his nails did, you would have died of yellow jaundice or gangrene or something that is colored like bank notes. I got a notion to accept him, George.

"I'll be glad if you do," said the Head Barber, "and after you two children are married I hope you will be happy. Shut up, now, kiddo, and let me shave this old fellow that is coming down the steps. He is a school teacher, and he doesn't like to hear you murdering the English language."

A Mysterious Disappearance

One of the Greatest Detective Stories Ever Written

By Gordon Holmes

TODAY'S INSTALMENT.

PART II. (Continued)

Copyright, 1905, by Edward J. Clode.

Miss Phyllis Browne Intervenes.

BRUCE was quite positive in his belief that Jane Harding was the paid agent of some person who wished to conceal the facts concerning Lady Dyke's death.

Her unexpected appearance in the field at this late hour, no less than the bold role she adopted, proved this conclusively. But in England there was no torture chamber to which she might be led and gradually dismembered until she confessed the truth.

So long as she adhered to the policy of pert denial she was quite safe. The law could not touch her, for the chief witness against her, Sir Charles Dyke, was obviously more than half inclined to admit the genuineness of the letter, even in opposition to the superior judgment of his friend.

Yet it was a matter which Bruce considered ought to be made known to the police, so he sent for Mr. White and told him of the strange result of his interview with Miss Marie le Marchant.

"Dash everything!" cried the detective when he heard the news. "I made a note some time ago that that girl ought to be watched, but I clean forgot all about it."

"Remember," said Bruce, "that my discovery was the result of pure accident. My object in visiting here was to endeavor to induce her confidence with regard to Lady Dyke's former life and habits. Indeed, I handled the business very badly."

"I don't see that, sir. You got hold of a very remarkable fact, and thus prevented the success of a bold move by some one which, in my case at any rate, nearly choked me off the inquiry."

"True. Thus far chance favored me. But I ought to have been content with the assumption. There was no need to frighten her by pressing it home."

"Oh, from that point of view"—began the detective.

But Bruce was merely thinking aloud—rough-shaping his ideas as they grouped themselves in his brain.

"Perhaps I am wrong there, too," he went on. "If this girl is working to instructions she would have refused to help me in any way, and she already knows that I am on the trail. There is one highly satisfactory feature in the Jane Harding adventure, Mr. White."

"And what is that?"

"The person, or persons, responsible for Lady Dyke's death know that the matter has not been dropped. They are inclined to think that the circle is narrowing. In some of our casts, Mr. White, we must have come so unpleasantly close to them that they deemed it advisable to throw us off the scent by a bold effort."

"No doubt you are right, sir, but I wish to goodness I knew when we were 'warm,' as I am becoming tired of the business. Every new development deepens the mystery."

The detective's face was as downcast as his words.

"Surely not! The more pieces of the puzzle we have to handle the less difficulty should be the final task of putting them together."

"Not when every piece is a fresh puzzle in itself."

"Why, what has disconcerted you today?"

Similar Views

"Mrs. Hillmer."

"What of her?"

"I have had another talk with the maid—her companion, you know—a girl named Dobson. It struck me that it was advisable to know more about Mrs. Hillmer than we do at present."

Bruce made no comment, but he could not help reflecting that Corbett, the stranger from Wyoming, had entertained the same view.

"Well," continued the detective, "I went about the affair as quietly as possible, but the maid, though willing, could not tell me much. Mrs. Hillman, she thinks, married very young, and was badly treated by her husband. Finally, there was a row, and she went on the stage, while Hillman drank himself to death. He died a year ago, and they had been separated nearly five years. He was fairly well to do, but he squandered all his money in dissipation and never gave her a cent. Three years last Michaelmas she set up her present establishment at Raleigh Mansions, and there she has been ever since."

"Then where does the money come from? It must cost her at least £2,000 a year to live."

"That's just what the maid can't tell me. Her mistress led a very secluded life, and was never what you could call fast, though a very pretty woman. During this time she had only one visitor—a gentleman."

"Ah."

"It sounds promising, but it ends in smoke, so far as I can see."

WHITE IS AGAIN STARTLED BY BRUCE'S DISCOVERY.

Bruce sent for White and told him of his interview with the maid.
(Posed by William P. Carleton and Charles Windsor, of "The Wall Street Girl" Company.)

"Why?"

"This gentleman was a Colonel Montgomery—an old friend—though he wasn't much turned thirty, the maid says. He interested himself a lot in Mrs. Hillmer's affairs, looked after some investments for her, and nobody could whisper a word against the character of either of them. He was never there except in the afternoon. On very rare occasions he took Mrs. Hillmer, whose maid always accompanied them, to Epping Forest, or up the river, or on some such journey."

"Go on!"

"I'm sorry, sir, but the chase is over. He's dead."

"Dead?"

"Yes. The maid doesn't know how, or when, exactly, but one day she found her mistress crying, and when she asked her what was the matter, Mrs. Hillmer said, 'I've lost my friend.' The maid said, 'Surely not Colonel Montgomery, madam?' and she replied, 'Yes.' She quite took on about it."

"Did the maid so plen as to the date of this interesting occurrence?"

"Only a vague one. Sometime in the autumn or before Christmas. By Jove, I say! It escaped me at the time, but she said that soon after the Colonel's death another gentleman called and took her mistress out to dinner. I was so busy thinking about the Colonel that I slipped the significance of that statement. It must have been you, Mr. Bruce."

"So it seems."

The barrister's active brain was already assimilating this new information, if a woman like Mrs. Hillmer had lost a dear and valuable friend—one who practically formed the horizon of her life—she would certainly have worn mourning for him. It was a singular coincidence that Mrs. Hillmer "lost" Colonel Montgomery about the same time that Lady Dyke disappeared. A detective and maid alike had drawn a false inference from Mrs. Hillmer's words.

Must Find Him

"We must find Colonel Montgomery," he said, after a slight pause.

"Find him!"

"Yes."

"I hope neither of us is going his way for some time to come, Mr. Bruce," laughed the policeman.

"White, I shall never cure you of jumping at conclusions. Upon your present evidence Colonel Montgomery is no more dead than you are."

"But the maid said"—

"I don't care if fifty maids said. There are many more ways of 'losing' a friend than by death. Pass me the Army List, on that bookshelf behind you there."

A brief reference to the index, and Bruce said:

"I thought so. There is no Colonel Montgomery. There are several captains and lieutenants and a major-general who has commanded a small island in the Pacific for the last five years, but not a single colonel. White, you have blundered into confusion in your profession."

"I am glad to hear it, even as you put it, Mr. Bruce. But I don't see—"

"I know you don't. If you did, a popular novelist would write your life and style you the English Lecocq. Mrs. Hillmer 'lost' the gallant colonel at the same time that the world 'lost' Lady Dyke. Find the first, and I am much mistaken if we do not learn all about the second."

"Now, I wonder if you are right."

The detective's eyes sparkled with animation. It was the first real clew he had hit upon, and Bruce's method of complimenting him on the fact did not dis concert him.

"Of course, I am right. You have done so well with the maid that I leave her in your hands. Try the coachman and the cook. But keep me informed of your progress."

White rushed off elated. So persistent was he in striving to elucidate this new problem that he paid no heed during seven days to the side-light furnished by Jane Harding and her exceedingly curious powers as a letter-writer.

Bruce purposely left the inquiry to the policeman.

He realized intuitively that the disappearance of Lady Dyke would soon be explained, but was strong from subjecting Mrs. Hillmer to further questioning.

His abstinence was rewarder later in the week, for Mcmanara came to see him. The young man wore an expression of settled melancholy which surprised the barrister greatly.

"Have you prevailed on your sister to take to him for confidence?" he said, when Mcmanara was ensconced in a chair in his cozy sitting-room.

"No. She is more fixed than ever in her resolve to take the whole blame on herself."

"Surely this mistaken idea can be dissipated?"

"I fear not."

"And you also share it?"

"I do. Bear with me, Bruce. This is a terrible business. It has broken me up utterly."

"Nonsense. You are in no way concerned save to shield your sister, and no one credits her with statements regarding her complicity in this crime."

"Look here, my dear fellow, I have come to see you if this investigation can not be allowed to rest. It means a lot of misery that you cannot foretell or prevent. Knowing what I do, I cannot believe that Lady Dyke was murdered."

No Other Inference

"Knowing what I do, I cannot accept any other conclusion. A worthy and excellent lady leaves her home suddenly without the slightest imaginary cause, and she is found in the Thames with a piece of silver let into her brain, while the medical evidence is clear that death was due to drowning. What other inference can be drawn than that she was foully done to death?"

"Heaven help me, I cannot tell. Yet I appeal to you to let matters rest where they are if it is possible."

"It is quite impossible. I cannot control the police. I am merely a private agent acting on my own responsibility and on behalf of Lady Dyke's relatives."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

It's a Hard Life

NO. 10—WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A CUCKOO?

By WEX JONES

THERE are all kinds of jobs in the world, as you probably know.

My idea of a nice job would be that of winding an eight-day clock. But such a position is hard to get, and if you do get one the boss will expect you to chop wood or something like that between winding days.

Among other jobs that I wouldn't mind tackling are bending pretzels—two a day—marine engineer of a rowboat, beating carpets by machinery, waiter to a canary, exercising a turtle on a lead. As I have said, such jobs are hard to get, and when you do get them you're likely to lose them quickly.

The trouble is that work sometimes doesn't offer itself just when you want it. You've sort of got to go after it and force it to offer itself. So that's why I went up to another hotel—Clamshell Lodge—and hit the boss for a job.

"What can you do besides wear tan shoes?" asked the boss.

"Anything from whistling like an armadillo to opening a ginger ale bottle with a soft-boiled egg."

"I'll give you a job," said the boss after a moment's thought.

"Rightie," said I.

"The large cuckoo clock is out of order. I want you to get up there every hour and cuckoo, so that our guests won't miss the familiar sound. The cuckoo clock Professor will be here the day after tomorrow, so your voice won't be overstrained."

I was having a nice luncheon when I happened to glance at the clock in the restaurant. It was 1:50.

I bolted from the table like a bull moose from a convention, knocking over a waiter or two in my mad rush. Just in the nick of time I reached the clock and chirped "Cuckoo—cuckoo."

It seemed an awful clock to take money for this, but about 6 o'clock I began to feel a bit weary. Then a terrible thought assailed me. How could I keep cuckooing away every hour through the night?

Reply to my own question: It couldn't be did.

Accordingly, I went to the boss. "If you have but a rooster, I'll take the job of crowing at sunrise, but I'll be hanged if I'll cuckoo every hour through the night."

"Can you imitate an Indian runner duck?" asked the boss.

"Sure," I said.

"Well, imitate one," said the boss. "Run for your life, you cuckoo, or you'll be a dead bird."

The guy that says "cuckoo" to me after this——

FRECKLES
New Drug That Quickly Removes These Homely Spots.
There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as a new drug, othine—double strength, is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.
Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength, from Hoagland Laboratories, Dept. Co., Hilton-Davis Drug Co., and apply a little of it at night, and in the morning you will see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and give a beautiful, clear complexion.
Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as it is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE STREET, July 10.—Midday.—The Boston market opened quietly and the tone was comparatively firm with a few coppers showing gains. During the morning trading was dull and there was a drooping tendency as to prices. Butte & Superior, Utah Consolidated, Shannon and United States Smelting preferred sold higher during the first hour, while Mason Valley, Shattuck Arizona, Old Colony, Lake and Osceola were the recessional list.

Aside from coppers, General Electric sold lower.

Big Market Opens Stronger.

There was more strength to the New York market at the opening today than featured it in late trading yesterday. Speculative sentiment grew more confident and substantial gains were recorded throughout the list. The most important trading was in Amalgamated, which rose 1⅞ in the first few minutes to 82¾. Later a part of this was lost. Advances of around ½ were recorded in Steel common, Reading, Union Pacific and the Hill stocks.

A few of the specialties were in good demand. Texas Company gained 1½ to 125¾. Canadian Pacific, which was sold in London, declined ½ here at the outset. Southern Railway was up ⅝, while Missouri Pacific made an advance of ⅝.

The Curb Steady.

The small curb trade gave American stocks a better tone in the London market, where the curb trade was only 4½ per cent. This was a good demand for copper issues and Rio Tintos advanced, but lost part of the gain on a reaction.

In the London copper metal market, spot opened at £75, an advance of 16s. 6d. The futures made the same gain at £75 17s. 6d. The market was firm.

Copper Metal Situation.

Copper metal was quoted higher in the London market at the opening today, and it is reported that a big business was done there in standard warrants during the morning session. The report of the Copper Producers' Association, showing a decrease in stocks on hand of 5,280,321 pounds during June, had a favorable effect. It was said by a Boston house that it understands that the General Electric Company, one of the largest consumers in the world, bought 2,000,000 pounds in London yesterday when the price broke so badly. In eight months copper advanced £25 in the London market, and at the close yesterday was about £6 below the highest price of the upward movement. The American Metal Market says: "The producers are understood to be still holding electrolytic at 17¾ cash delivered, and there is very little prospect of their being tested by bids to really find out what their price is, for the reason that the foreign decline has made a very bad impression with the American consumers."

Telephone Stock Issue.

The directors of the New England Telephone Company have authorized an issue of 39,176 shares of stock, to be offered pro rata to stockholders, and each stockholder of July 20 record may subscribe for one new share for each five held. Rights will expire on August 21 next and subscriptions to be filed before that date. Full payment to full by September 12 will be exacted.

Financial News in Brief.

The government July report indicates bumper crops for all it covers except Winter wheat. Spring wheat, oats, rye and barley are all above the average for ten years. In fact all crop news is gratifying. The potato yield will be much heavier than a year ago, and the hay crop may will be harvested this year than last.

The Lackawanna Steel Co. will work for the Oklahoma shops that employed, are not operating. Reports from Buffalo say that one of the chief causes of the shutdown was the increased traffic into Fall. The same is true of most others.

At the London meeting of the Maxwell Co. the promoter of Chinese cotton mills in the United States into communication with Asia and South America by his promotion.

Corporations used to think that what was their business was nobody else's, but the Steel Corporation, one of the largest in the country, especially the investing portion thereof, demands to be informed right and left, and it publishes facts regarding capitalistic complexities—large and small alike—not only as a matter of public duty, but also for the good of the corporations. It is no longer entirely with secretiveness.

The American Locomotive Co. will build sixteen locomotives for the Virginian Railroad, a new line for the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio and the Canadian Pacific. The Virginian Railroad recently ordered fifteen and is to have a total of twelve more.

Chicago, Burlington & Quincy earnings for the last fiscal year were at the rate of 12⅞ per cent. on its $171,000,000 stock. Gross earnings for the year earnings were 15 per cent.

Chicago & Northwestern of New York says: "Its decrease of $761,000 in net earnings in June statement was due to the fact that its did not earn a dividend on its stock and pay its fixed charges."

Own conditions are more favorable than the government report indicated because it was compiled before many rains had fallen in the winter belt.

It is expected that June earnings of the anthracite roads will be about normal. Shipment during the first half of the month was 5,000,000 tons, which is about the same as during the same other year.

In spite of dark and cool weather and other troubles the trade of Great Britain increased greatly during the first half of the present year. The gain in imports was about $100,000,000 and exports $50,000,000 over last year. The increased native trade because of the coal strike are responsible for the gain in exports, but the gain in imports is not due to coal, since no is usual to be made in January and February. Cotton, wool, grain and provisions are the chief items in which New York been so large of stocks as they are today.

Reports from the Pacific coast to the Boston brokers' office in Boston recently found that nearly all of the fruit there would be ready to ship starts on balance.

It is said that the reason why Washington H. Thomas resigned as president of the American Locomotive Co. was that he will remain a member of the board of directors of the company.

The reason assigned for the present high price of lead was the small bar crop of last year. It did not rain enough at the right time. But this year's crop will be very large, according to all reports of conditions. Thompson, Towle & Co.'s Finance commercial says that the lead crop was damage from hot and dry weather conditions was affected by the general rains which have visited the National during the last week. It is safe to say that in most sections new developments in the crop situation are not to be looked for, but a bumper yield of condition at the close of the season. Condition today is very satisfactory in practically every part of the belt.

It is understood in Chicago that Herman Straus will be elected president of the American Straw Board Co.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN BOSTON JULY 10, 1912

BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JULY 10, 1912

Largest Circulation in New England, DAILY and SUNDAY.

The Boston American Will Try to Tell You ALL the Political News

You Will Get in This Newspaper Not Only the Side of Mr. Wilson, the Democratic Nominee, but Also the Side—the Argument and Appeals—of President Taft and of Theodore Roosevelt.

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

The Boston American proposes to give to those interested in politics—no matter what their party may be—all of the news, AND IMPARTIALLY. As you have learned from this editorial column, the Hearst newspapers throughout the country support the candidacy of Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic nominee.

In addition to giving the news and views of Mr. Wilson, the Boston American will give fully the news of Mr. Taft's campaign, the news of Mr. Roosevelt's campaign, and the views of Mr. Taft and Mr. Roosevelt.

All that happens in politics of importance you may learn by reading the Boston American.

Our regular columns will take care of the Wilson campaign.

The Hearst newspapers hereby offer to President Taft a column daily to be published conspicuously, and to be written under his direction by writers to be chosen by him.

And we offer to Colonel Roosevelt a daily column to be devoted to his campaign and to the arguments of his followers.

This publicity which we offer to the candidates is publicity ON A BIG SCALE. In Boston alone our circulation is something more than six times as big as that of any other evening newspaper.

And we shall publish these articles also in our New York newspaper, the Evening Journal, which has a circulation equal to that of all the other New York evening newspapers combined.

And we shall publish the same articles in our evening newspaper in Chicago—the Chicago American, which has a circulation exceeding that of any other Chicago newspaper.

Candidates wishing to avail themselves of the opportunity to reach several millions of voters daily without any cost whatever are invited to select their spokesmen and begin publication at once.

We intend that our readers shall know all that the important candidates have to say—in addition to reading what we may have to say about them.

End the National Shame of Lorimer

The Senate of the United States owes it to the dignity and decency of the times to purify its rolls of William Lorimer of Illinois.

It should make short work of Lorimer, and a unanimous vote would vindicate the Senate's long delay.

Lorimer is the type and illustration of the graft and lucre politics of this generation. All that is worst and most reprehensible in American public life has been represented in this man's rise to the Senate. Not without personal qualities that attract, he is the product and spotheosis of the system whose rottenness is about to destroy in him its own most notable creation.

Every ramification of selfish interest and corrupt manipulation has been touched and utilized in putting this pliant tool of corporations into the highest deliberative body of the world.

It is Lorimer who has furnished the argument and the object lesson by which the great doctrine of direct elections has gathered force and is now sweeping to a triumphant national conclusion.

It is Lorimer who has pointed and emphasized in his sordid methods and success the absolute necessity of taking government out of the hands of bosses and tricksters and traders and giving it back to the people.

A vote for Lorimer has retired men from Congress and the lower offices of public life. Because of his vote for Lorimer the Illinois primaries have practically retired from the Senate Shelby M. Cullom, the friend of Abraham Lincoln and the nominator of Ulysses S. Grant, after twenty-nine years of Senatorial service. Not even the association with Lincoln nor the service to Grant could save the venerable Illinoisan from the wrath of his people over the vote for Lorimer. Roosevelt charged home upon Taft his supposed affiliation and indorsement of Lorimer, and the Illinois primaries buried Taft under a Roosevelt majority of 150,000 votes!

American public sentiment has rarely, if ever, been more aroused upon any personal issue than that of Lorimerism.

It is difficult to see how any Senator of the United States feeling the dignity and responsibility of his great station could be led by any mistaken sympathy or by any personal regard to cast a vote for holding this man in a seat honored by the great Illinois names of the past and utterly abased and prostituted by the occupancy of Lorimer and all that Lorimer implies.

The vote to send Lorimer home in order to be impressive should be unanimous.

The First View of the Ocean

The Growth of Feminine Optimism

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"I find earth not gray but rosy,
Heaven not grim but fair of hue.
Do I stoop? I pluck a posy.
Do I stand and stare? All's blue."
—BROWNING.

Is the world becoming more philosophical? Tears are no longer a daily sight, and I refuse to credit their absence to indifference.

There was a time when preacher and player alike had an easy time reducing an audience to tears. In those days, the tear is seen as little in the church as in the theatre.

Whatever the occasion, there is a growing disposition to meet it with a smile. Disaster, sickness, sorrow, disappointment, and death itself, are all met more bravely than a few generations ago.

We have become wiser, and that means that we have become more cheerful.

"Do we stoop? If is not to find a thorn, but a posy.

Do we stand and stare? It is not to see signs of a storm, but to note the blue that is left in the sky.

We are becoming a nation of optimists, and I claim that this is largely due to the growing influence of woman. Always the one to find the bright side of her home, her influence has spread beyond her four walls. She is the one who finds when there is a financial wreck that there is enough of the debris for a new beginning.

She is one who, when her husband comes home with a broken limb, is grateful that it isn't his neck. She is always looking for the posies when she stoops, and for the blue in the sky when she stands and stares.

This optimism was not always natural to her. She acquired it when confronted with the task of cheering up father, husband and son.

It is a good habit. It is a good habit to get early.

Cowper gives just two lines I want young girls to remember:

"Beware of desperate steps; the darkest day
Lived till tomorrow will have passed away."

Commit these lines to memory and act upon them. No one dare tell a girl whose trouble is great that she has no trouble, or that it is not as great as she thinks.

Time, and time alone, has the right to tell her that. It can prove that if a trouble is "lived till tomorrow" it will have passed away.

That is all. Don't act rashly today. Wait till tomorrow, and with tomorrow always comes wisdom. If not, then wait till another tomorrow.

There once lived a woman who had a great sorrow. The day before that set for her wedding day her lover was killed.

How did she live through it?

"I always said every morning," she once told a friend, "that my friends had troubles which I must consider before my own. I will go to them and help them,' I would say, 'and when tomorrow comes I will give way to my own grief.'"

And so she lived her days till they became weeks and months and years, always devoting TODAY to the sorrows of others, and putting off the giving way to her own sorrow till TOMORROW.

Tomorrow never came! And her life was spent in a devotion to others that was far better than a devotion to her grief.

Not a bad idea, was it? It is the only kind of procrastination of which the gods approve. A procrastination of tears.

It is a procrastination the whole world is acquiring. For the smile is a newer, finer, nobler, braver fashion.

I want my girls whose troubles seem great to try this new fashion.

Look for the posies when you stoop, and for the blue when you stand and stare.

There may be much to weep about, but let's put off the tears till tomorrow.

THE Governors of five of the New England States have agreed to edit the Sunday AMERICAN, for five successive Sundays during July and August.

On Sunday, July 14, Governor Frederick W. Plaisted of Maine.
On Sunday, July 21, Governor Robert P. Bass of New Hampshire.
On Sunday, July 28, Governor Eugene N. Foss of Massachusetts.
On Sunday, August 4, Governor Aram J. Pothier of Rhode Island.
On Sunday, August 11, Governor John A. Mead of Vermont.

In inviting the Governors of New England to supplant the regular editor on the five Sundays named, the AMERICAN suggested that each prepare a leading editorial on some subject of vital interest to the State he represents, and to select as far as practicable the news to be presented on that day.

These five "Governors' Editions" will present to the people of the New England States the most important matters that concern the general welfare.

One Governor regards good roads as a most important subject for discussion, and another public regulation of railroad lines serving New England.

Governor Bass in accepting the AMERICAN'S invitation writes:

To interest the Governors in New England journalism is certainly a new departure and one with which I thoroughly sympathize. The AMERICAN has always co-operated with the men responsible for the progressive movement in my State and it is always a pleasure for me to co-operate with it in so far as I can.

Governor Foss in his note of acceptance writes:

I shall be very glad to furnish the leading editorial for the Sunday AMERICAN of July 28, and will probably take as my subject, "Public regulation of the railroad lines serving New England; why past Legislatures have refused to grant it, and how to get it this Fall."

Governor Pothier writes:

My contribution may not be a message to the citizens of New England, but I will try to bring to their attention matters which I shall consider of interest to them.

Governor Plaisted writes:

I should be pleased to comply with the request contained in your letter.

Governor Mead writes:

I assure you it will be a pleasure to accept your invitation, and upon my return to Rutland (Governor Mead wrote from Chicago), I will be pleased to give the matter attention. We will arrange the subject then.

Prosperity; Government

Prosperity Is Not Dependent Upon the Election of a President -:-

By THOMAS TAPPER

A GOOD many earnest people try to convince us that Prosperity depends entirely on who happens to be President of the United States.

When Populism was rioting through Kansas in 1896, like a cyclone, William Allen White wrote an editorial on the movement in which he begged to suggest to the Kansan that he "raise more crops and less hell."

When citizens get down to business and raise crops, Prosperity takes care of itself; when they begin to raise the other thing, it is impossible even for the President of the United States to take care of Prosperity.

The Crop is the thing. Any man who devotes his days to industry is a crop raiser. If he cares for his money, manages himself and his household on a wise and economic basis, he will be prosperous. When, by careful management, he has been able to set aside a Ten Dollar bill for deposit in the savings bank, the name of the President of the United States is not likely to enter his mind while he is waiting for the return of his bankbook. He is probably pleased to know that he has so ordered his affairs as to have the money for deposit. And if he thinks further, he may realize that while Prosperity in general is talked of a great deal and freely argued, it does him no good until he finds the perspiration of hard work and careful management streaming down his own face.

Considerable attention has recently been given to the point of view of Mrs. John H. Flagler, in reference to labor problems in the household. Mrs. Flagler points out that when the mistress of a house begins to recognize a difference between her servants and the furniture of the kitchen, there will be less domestic friction. This all means careful study of household management. Politics has nothing to do with that.

As a man intent on securing the benefits of prosperity, you will realize that loud talk and argument put no money in the bank. Prosperity and Politics have a relation, but you will never know much about it until you fix the mind on getting all the prosperity you can OUT OF YOUR OWN INDUSTRY.

There are countless voters in the United States who feel that they could run the government, but who, very apparently, cannot run themselves. The great value of learning, that government means guidance, management, and control, lies in settling down to the business of gilding, managing and controlling one's self.

You have your crops to raise and your money to spend. You raise crops by being busy and turning out as much good work as lies in you. Most men, like you, think they know how to spend money. But they do not. There never was a harder thing to learn than how to distribute the income, doing it with justice to yourself and all others.

Government and organizations of men become very powerful, but let every acre of ground in America produce its maximum of crops, and you will see all the rulers of the people standing in amazement at the vastness of prosperity.

Likewise, let every working man work with all his energy, let him learn how to govern himself, to administer his family affairs, to begin to set aside some of his earnings as a fund for the future, and he will tell you without hesitation that while it may pay to argue about Politics and Prosperity, he, in the meantime, is taking care of his own Prosperity, BY PRODUCING IT.

The gentleman who meanders through life looking for a windfall or a pension is apt to get shabby and to lose connection with three meals a day. Until he comes back, he is a stray dog without a master. What he needs, is to examine the power of the Initiative IN HIS OWN BEHALF. He must set things going again. The wise advice of all philosophers, once expressed in these words: "First be sure you are right, then go ahead," is the Initiative in its highest form.

If you are fond of trout, it will give you only a second-hand form satisfaction to sit on the bank of the stream and see another man catch them. If you want them in your own frying pan, you know what to do.

Prosperity is the same. If you want it, go out and get it. The fact that another man across the street is making good will not cheer up your family.

There is a very direct connection between Prosperity and Government, but the connection is first with self-government. Most men are prone to wish that all things be done for them. But the man who wins out sees the joke in that platform and begins to do all things for himself.

TOGETHER

We two in the fever and fervor and glow
Of life's high tide have rejoiced together;
We have looked out over the glittering snow,
And known we were dwelling in Summer weather,
For the seasons are made by the heart I hold,
And not by outdoor heat or cold.

We two, in the shadows of pain and woe,
Have journeyed together in dim, dark places,
Where black-robed Sorrow walked to and fro,
And Fear and Trouble, with phantom faces,
Peered out upon us and froze our blood,
Though June's fair roses were all in bud.

We two have measured all depths, all heights,
We have bathed in tears, we have sunned in laughter;
We have known all sorrows and delights—
They never could keep us apart hereafter.
Whether your spirit went high or low,
My own would follow, and find you, I know.

If they took my soul into Paradise,
And told me I must be content without you,
I would weary them so with my lonesome cries,
And the ceaseless questions I asked about you,
They would open the gates and set me free,
Or else they would find you and bring you to me.
